FOREWORD

College avenue is not really an avenue but part of a highway. In Kansas City it's called the Express way and in Shreveport it's Long boulevard. The part of the highway that is claimed by Arkansas carefully winds up the left side of the state and then turns east for a little while at Fort Smith until it meets another highway — a wide, black highway that has crossed the cotton fields and ricelands of eastern Arkansas to reach this spot at the base of the mountain.

The highways meet at Alma and one turns northward, moving up the mountain. Here the highway is dangerous, and for fifty miles it curves, dives, winds and loops around the mountain above the passes and valleys that burn with color in the autumn and harbor clouds of rain and snow in the winter. The highway glazes with ice in the winter and isolates the small cities in the northwest corner of the state. Then is when it is most dangerous.

At Winslow and West Fork the highway stops climbing and glides into the city limits of Fayetteville. Here, for a short time, before speeding out toward the Missouri border and Kansas City, the highway becomes College avenue.

Before it is halfway through Fayetteville, College avenue is bisected by Dickson street, which passes through Schuler Town to the University. The University is the focal point of the activities of more than 4,400 students. Here the students are given an opportunity to learn, to think and plan, and to participate in the affairs of a great institution. With learning comes understanding, and with understanding comes the realization that every year spent at the University is a significant and gratifying experience.

The significance of this year is the purpose and only theme of this book. It is a review of events, but more than that, it is a review of the people that came from the black delta of eastern Arkansas and the flat plains to the south and drove up the mountain.

The University of Arkansas at one time occupied one hill and was housed in one building. Since that time the University has grown to cover more than a hundred acres in Fayetteville and spread experiment stations and research centers throughout the state. Along with the physical growth has come diversification. The agricultural program attracts students from all over the world; the engineering college is one of the finest in the United States; and the fine arts building is recognized as one of the outstanding centers of culture in the midwest. Every year in September several thousand people move onto a campus that is struggling to keep pace with its enrollment. The students that are freshmen look around and begin to try to make a place for themselves in this environment that is new and, to some extent, challenging. Some of them accept their responsibility of independence and a few of them refuse to. The older students renew acquaintances and begin to follow patterns of living that they have previously made for themselves. The patterns that guide a student through four or more years at the University have a purpose; the purpose itself, however, is vague and nebulous, the definition lost somewhere between the freshman year and graduation. This book does not attempt to define the purpose, but only to reflect these patterns that are familiar and the people that follow them, and the progress of a year that grows in importance as it slips further into the memories of those that lived it.

The Razorback band is a vital part of the spectacle of fall. Marching onto the field before the opening game, the band reflects the spirit of the crowd and the excitement of the weekend; for several weeks the tenor of the University depends upon the fortunes and talents of eleven men on Saturday afternoons.

ORCHESTRA REHEARSALS are conducted at night and during Saturday afternoon, require time and patience and result in some of the University's outstanding programs.

SUMMER

UNION ENTRANCE takes on a castle-like appearance in a heavy fog of early winter.

Fall: Confusion in the Fieldhouse

The line stretched from in front of the men's gym past the shade of the trees by the walk and curled to a parallel with the building. The students baked and complained in a hot September sun while waiting to enter the old Fieldhouse and join hundreds of other students in the confusion of registration. The scuffle and scrape of feet and chairs and the rustle of papers under the drone of the loudspeaker marked the official beginning of the year. And although the beginning was characterized by confusion, it was appropriate for the months that were to come.

The administration worried about the unexpected 14 percent increase in student enrollment and the students worried about the increase in the cost of education. The administration worried about the increase in the cost of attending the University, too. Later in the year the College of Business Administration tried to suppress the results of a poll that indicated the average cost of a year at Arkansas was $1,290 per student. When the Traveler printed the findings of the poll, the administration grudgingly admitted that the figures quoted in the official handbook ($700 per year) might be "a little low."

The Student Senate began a year of controversy with the passage of REGISTRATION is a frantic combination of personal confusion and general chaos. The semi-annual spectacular is supervised from the control desk.

FOOTBALL FEVER infected the campus and most of the state during the early months of autumn. Anxious fans filled Razorback stadium to watch the efforts of a new coach and his well-groomed talented team against stiff opposition of Southwest conference opponents.

a bill that prohibited the "A" club's selling beanies to freshmen and sharply criticized the lettermen for "coercive" measures used to induce sales. President of Associated Students Ray Thornton vetoed the bill and the senate went charging off down another alley.

This was the year that Princess Margaret decided in favor of the Commonwealth and refused to marry a commoner. Group Captain Peter Townsend never amounted to more than just a shadow in romantic history, and it was only proper that Lord Salisbury had sternly maintained that the whole unfortunate incident be treated with the dignity such affairs of state deserve. While British troops in Asia were being killed in a shooting war with the Communists, other "commoners" all over the world agreed that dignity was the most important thing indeed.

Football season added color to fall and accelerated the weekends. A curious crowd of 18,000 fans sat on their hands while cautious and unsure Razorbacks scored a 21-6 victory over a team they had defeated by almost twice the score the preceding year, and the critics were skeptical of the man from Wichita who replaced Bowden Wyatt as head football coach. As the season progressed, however, Razorback stock began to rise; pig soeys filled the stands and things started to look better all around. Business school classes were dismissed the afternoon the Yankees met the Dodgers at Yankee Stadium for the seventh game of the World Series. Brooklyn won 2-0 with Johnny Podres on the mound and things began to look better elsewhere, too.

RUSH WEEK finally ended with exhausted Greeks, tired-but-happy pledges.

MOVING IN at Holcombe hall was expedited for the freshman girls by the scores of upperclassmen who annually gather to "help with the bags." Many men returned to "work" for the first few days. William Lyon, above, assists a new student with her luggage.

NEW ROOMMATES Diane Dameron and Jackie Davis get acquainted while trying to arrange clothes and incidentals.

TEDDY PANOS tries to find room in bureau for the many things a girl needs at college.

TRUNKS usually presented the most difficult problem of moving in.

CLOSET SPACE was another problem, particularly for most of the coeds. Mothers, sisters and aunts were quick to offer suggestions.

Preparing for a year

Moving in and preparing for a year at school is a prodigious, frightening and frustrating task. Stuffing clothes in an under-sized bureau is trying; arranging trunks and suitcases in an inadequate closet is impossible. Mothers help their freshmen daughters unpack, arrange and store, making it difficult for the girls to find anything at all after their parents have gone. Wise fathers are cognizant of their status in the moving in, and after the last trunk or foot locker has been carried up to the room, they find an empty or partially cluttered bed and take a nap until the operation is completed.

FATHERS were usually not consulted after the trunks and suitcases had been carried up. This one is letting mother and daughter unpack.

KAPPA PLEDGES entertained the capacity crowd at the orientation show with a skit about various types of coeds. Gail Wood, in front of chorus line, executes a wierd combination of a softshoe and bop, while the chorus shrieks the words to pop-tune "Seventeen."

Orientation: Legs and talent

The orientation skits in the Greek theatre presented by the new pledge classes of the various sororities are rarely organized, poorly planned and always entertaining. Revolving principally around leg art and occasionally featuring a pledge with some sort of less obvious talent, the skits are similar in form and presentation every year.

For girls to plan a skit in the first few days after pledging is in itself a difficult, if not foolhardy, task, and the lack of polish in production is overlooked by a not-too-discriminating audience.

Orientation is directed by the men's honorary Omicron Delta Kappa. The skits for this year's orientation show were tied together in a single, confusing afternoon by Steve B. Friedheim, who, having directed the varsity show for the 1954 Gaebale, was aware of the staging and lighting difficulties presented by the open-air theatre.

DIRECTOR of the sorority pledge skits, Steve Friedheim, puffs on his pipe before next act.

SINGING about perils and pitfalls of campus life at University, a coed dances in front of chorus, reminds freshmen to be wary.

PATTER was exchanged about scholarship by two sorority pledges representing opposite extremes of coeds.

CLASS CARDS were obtained after standing in lines for interminable periods of time and lengthy explanations.

SIGNING CARDS, Virginia Lynn writes items of information for public relations department and dean's office.

SIGNING CHECKS for fees was done with snide remarks and soft groans. Blank checks were thoughtfully provided.

SIGNING FORMS for the department of physical education, freshman girls make use of the only available flat surface in the women's gymnasium.

ADVISING STUDENTS, business instructor Cecil Walton offered help at registration while sitting under one of the multitude of signs. This inaccurately-spelled sign designates the table for freshmen and "sophmores."

BOOKSTORE was crowded during registration and days afterward; clerks remained friendly, cooperative despite the ordeal.

Discordant songs and little cookies

The sound of sorority rush is a happy sound, filled with loud, discordant songs and the meaningless chatter of rush talk. Sorority officers drill their members for several days on the name and background of every girl going through rush, and they practice songs until past midnight. During the day they rush: smile, munch cookies, drink Cokes, giggle and try to remember names and home towns. The night before bids are turned in to the Dean of Women, the girls go into another meeting and worry about quotas and hurting feelings. When the new pledges come running to the house, the coeds hug and dance and cry, and then they go into the house to drink Cokes and sing more songs.

STRAIN and fatigue of rush week on their faces, Kappas entertain new pledges with a breakfast of Cokes, cookies and evangelical sorority songs.

RUSH WEEK all but finished, happy Pi Phis greet new pledges in the front yard with hugs and shrieks. Every year fraternity men from over the hill come to watch the annual circus of emotions.

CHI OMEGAS switch on the charm at one of the rush parties during early part of the week.

FLIPPANT FLAPPER Carol Ann Lackey sings to rushees about the Roaring 20's, bathtub gin and Kappa Kappa Gamma. Differing from fraternity rush skits, sorority shows were relatively well-planned and rehearsed at least once.

KATHY CRAN, a rushee from Little Rock, smiles at the African-flavored Delta Gamma rush show.

BREAKFAST for bid-receiving rushees was held at the Zeta Tau Alpha house the morning of pledging.

WALKING to rush parties, girls chat about houses attended or to-be-attended, try to conceal obvious excitement that attends every rushee.

SQUEALING, hugging, sighing. Tri-Delts welcome new pledges in an unrestrained display of rejoice and satisfaction after week of work.

DELTA GAMMAS show rushees their basement game room on tour of their house during a rush party early in the week.

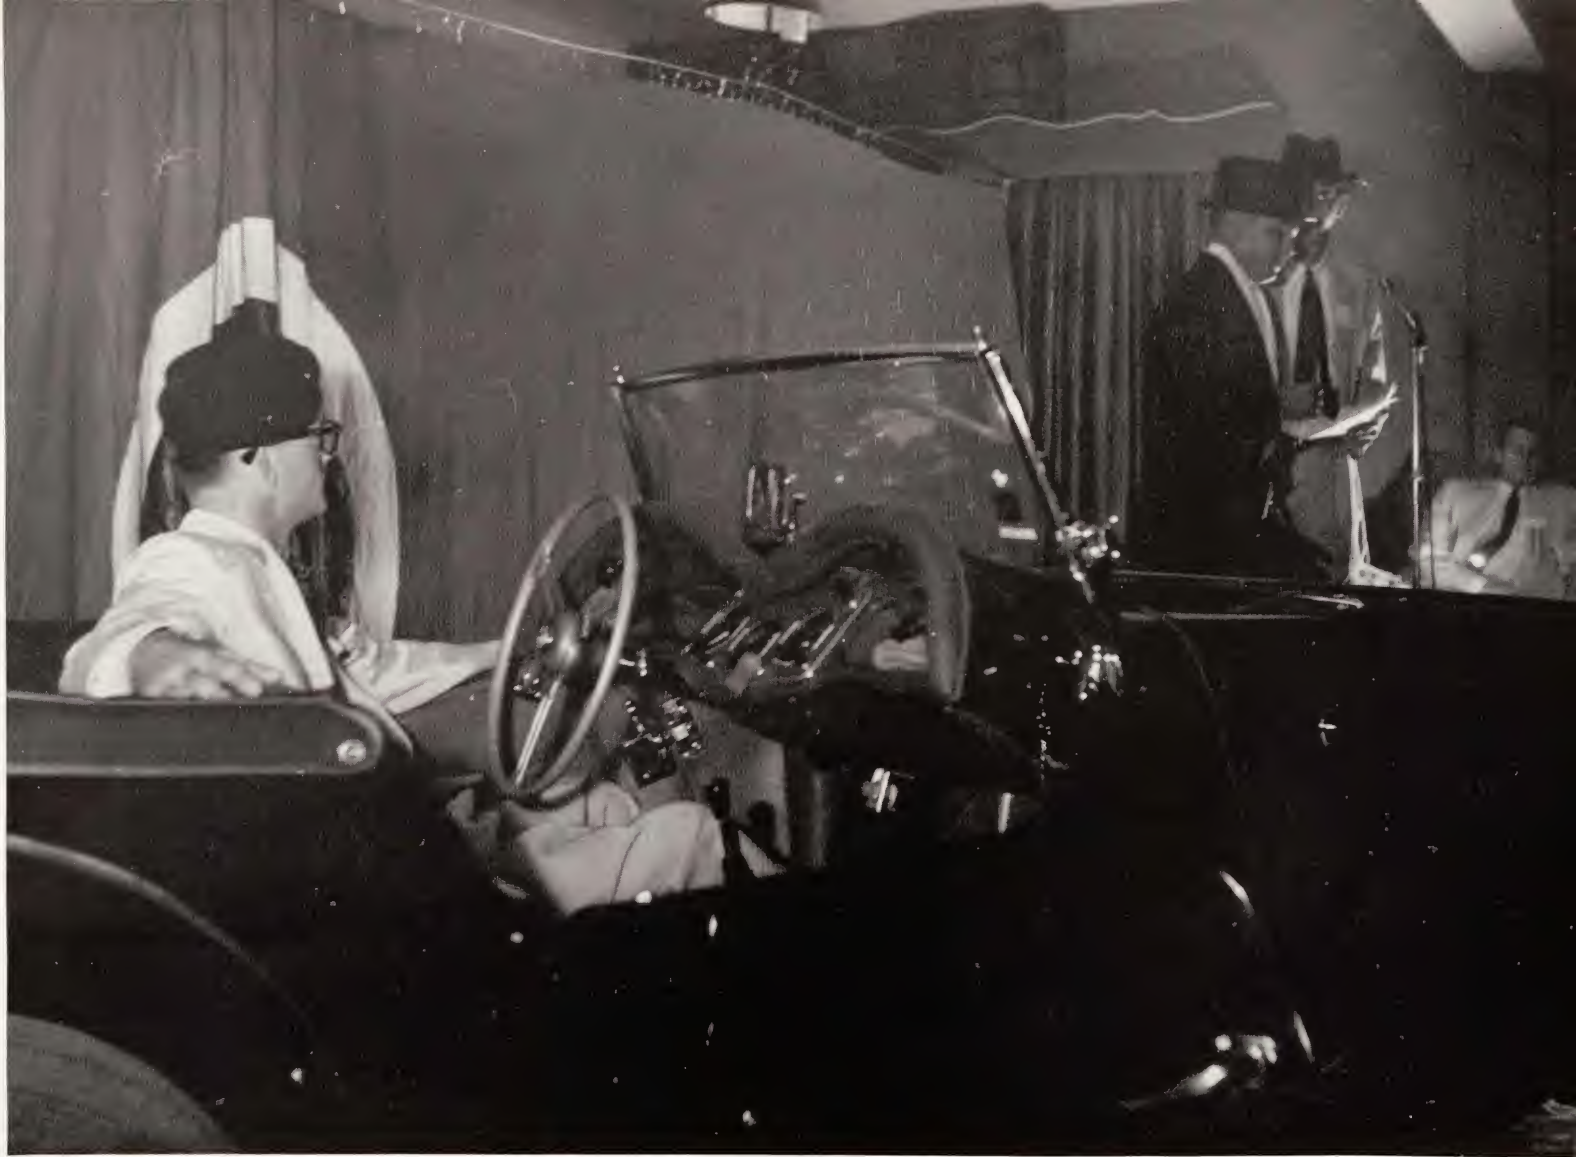

Rush: Look for the name tag

Fraternity rush is a mixture of back-slapping gobbledegook and ear-grinning malarky. Many of the rushees come up to the University already having decided which fraternity to pledge: They just go through rush for the ride. It's quite a ride. Rush skits are written the night before the parties and practiced once if at all. A cursory effort is made by some of the more diligent members of the fraternity to learn the names of a few of the rushees, but fraternity men usually rely on the name tags worn by the rushees for the necessary information. The rush talk used by all fraternities is standard: "Undying bonds of brotherhood," "great contacts around the state," and every fraternity is the best on the campus, which is good. The rushees are confused enough by all of the Greek letters.

HANDSHAKING his way into the Sigma Chi house, Bud Trentham begins a week of confusing faces, forgotten names as fraternity rush week gets underway.

SIGMA CHI combo is expected entertainment at the Ski parties.

WAITING for bids to be extended Saturday afternoon, rushees assemble in the Student ballroom, visit, sing or listen to the clamor by fraternity men outside.

CROWD on the lawn in front of the Union was waiting to greet and congratulate their new pledges.

FINAL encouragement is given to rushees as they enter dorms the night before bids were extended.

FRATERNITIES group together on the lawn and in the street near the Student Union steps to wait for their pledges.

EXCITED coeds stop pledges with hugs as boys try to work their way through the crowd to their fraternity.

WATCHING through the Union doorway, fraternities hold signs high and await outcome of ballroom meeting.

HEAD MAJORETTE Gail Wood, a Kappa from Bowie, Texas, leads the victory march across field after the SMU game, is watched by clarinet player, right.

DRUM MAJOR Bob Griffin struggles for balance after pranking member kicked his makeshift podium.

CHEWING NAILS, a majorette watches downfield play before lining up for the halftime activities.

RAZORBACK BAND offers Dallas an early morning serenade of fight tunes and marching songs before boarding bus for the SMU game.

“Washington Post” and hamburgers

MEALS on band trips are short and light, are usually picked up in some roadside cafe and consist mainly of cold sandwiches and Cokes.

The Razorback Band, under the capable direction of Roger Widder, followed the team to out-of-town games, made a goodwill tour through the state and had the opportunity to play with trumpet artist Raphael Mendez during the concert season. On football Saturdays the band would swing onto the field behind drum major Bob Griffin, a Kappa Sig from Fort Smith in his third season at the head of the band, and perform a halftime show laboriously practiced during the preceding week. With little sleep and meals of hamburgers and milk when traveling, the band represented the University in a capacity that is taken for granted by the student body and sometimes neglected by a busy administration.

Pig sooeys and blaring horns

Homecoming, with its torchlight parade, pep rally, floats, decorations and dances, is the largest single event in the fall. Houses work for weeks on floats and yard decorations, and make extensive plans to entertain returning alums with buffet luncheons, open houses and after-game parties. The climax of the festival is the afternoon game. With this year's 7-7 tie with Texas A&M, pig sooeys echoed around the campus for hours after the contest, horns blared and George's was full until date call. The house decorations looked limp on Sunday morning and were torn down and removed by weary pledges or freshmen on Monday. The Sunday sports pages were complimentary, the alums were satisfied and students began to look forward to the Christmas holidays. It was a good Homecoming.

BUILDING FLOAT for homecoming queen Susan Eberle. Lynn Logan, a Kappa from Camden, stuffs one of the thousands of paper napkins used in decorations.

TORCHLIGHT PARADE up Dickson street was a high-point of the festivities the night before the homecoming parade and game. Led by a convertible with cheerleaders spilling over the sides and the Razorback band, the parade increased in size as it neared the Greek theatre.

CHICKEN-WIRE and strips of plywood formed foundation for most of the floats in Homecoming parade. Pat Maginniss and Leon Hill, above, stretch the chicken-wire base used for crown on queen's float.

ZETAS Margot Herzog, Gaye Warren, Martha Doty and Carol Ewell add the final touch to the windmill used as the yard decoration.

TRI-DELTS worked long and hard on a giant paper dragon with smoking nostrils and rolling tongue.

SIGMA NU won first place in men's division of contest for second straight year with animated clock, complete with coo-coo bird, sound effects.

STORE WINDOWS downtown and close to the campus were painted with welcome signs to returning alums, visitors.

LAWYERS CLOWNED in the Homecoming parade with an early model automobile, false beards. Bar Association members suffered a few moments of anticipation when car was faced with task of climbing Dickson street hill, but the car, like lawyers, climbed to the finish.

SCARLET ballerina slippers reminded Razorbacks to be "On Your Toes", won third place for Zetas in float contest.

PI BETA PHI float featured Pi Phis cinching corset on somewhat oversized torso, won attention of crowd and second place.

SIGMA CHI float called for the Razorbacks to "break the record" of the Texas A&M Aggies, offered amplified music to the crowd, but didn't place.

DOWNFALL of Texas A&M was illustrated by Pi Kappa Alpha in their house decoration, which showed a hapless cadet plunging over a unique, man-made waterfall. Decoration was a favorite of visitors and contest judges, won first place trophy.

CROWD lines the walk in front of the Kappa Sig house to watch the floats and bands in parade.

PASSING TIME until they make presentation of crown and roses to Homecoming queen, Arkansas' Governor Orval Faubus and University's President John Tyler Caldwell relax while crowd in background huddles in the strong wind.

CHECKING RIFLES, members of the drill platoon make final preparations before marching in pre-game parade.

WINKING QUEENS, Susan Eberle and her court, flirt with the photographer.

MAJORETTES stand at attention while the band plays the Alma Mater during halftime. Gail Wood is in foreground.

CROWD STRETCHES before play resumes after the half. Alums traveled from all parts of the state to watch the Razorbacks play the Aggies to a 7-7 tie.

COSTUME PARTIES of all varieties spread across campus and brought out students in wierd, grotesque and humorous rainment. Above, Phi Delts and dates dance under tape and crepe paper decorations at annual She Delta Theta half-formal.

BOP ARTISTS engrossed in the throes of creation, draw stares of approval and shock at a weekend party at Sigma Chi house.

BOB CHASTAIN and Molly Bowling adjust costumes at Kappa Sigma Suppressed Desire party.

TEETH are removed with a grease pencil by a coed in Dogpatch finery.

SIGMA NUS littered floor of house with straw and dressed accordingly for Sadie Hawkins day dance, which featured dancing, dinner-on-the-floor.

Outdated clothes and paraphenalia

The costume party is the traditional way to fill empty dates in the social calendar. Every year before school, students climb into attics and basements of their homes and dig into trunks for outdated clothes and outlandish paraphenalia for costumes. Themes for the parties are necessary for novel invitations, but are forgotten when the costumes are assembled. The Suppressed Desire party, Moonshiner's Ball, Hollywood Premier and Poverty party all had their share of tramps, bumpkins, showgirls and cowboys. Some lodges claim that their costume parties are an excuse to break the routine of studying, but actually there is no excuse for costume parties. There doesn't have to be.

CORN IS GREEN was the theme of the Sigma Phi Epsilon annual Moonshiner's Ball. Prohibitionist Archie Ryan and date look for offenders.

BLUE KEY luncheon at Homecoming featured J. William Fulbright, Arkansas' junior senator, as principal speaker.

CUSTARD PIE covers face of triumphant coed who found the buried mint in one of the contests in Sigma Nu relays.

DAVE BRUBECK was brought to the campus by the arts and concerts committee. 2,500 students packed men's gym to listen to the progressive jazz artist.

PATIO DANCE was sponsored by Blue Key to accompany the dedication of the new addition to the Student Union. The patio, built with Blue Key and Student Senate funds, was wind-swept and cold the day set for the ceremony, and the few students who ventured out from the grill to dance were told that Dean Halladay's speech had been cancelled.

WET KAPPAS waded through water-filled pit on the intramural field after losing tug-o-war to Tri-Delts in the Sigma Nu relays.

RAINY AFTERNOONS brought out bright umbrellas and brighter raincoats, soaked the campus, dampened spirits and made late afternoon classes unbearably long.

WINTER

Winter: Cheer with caution

It was wet at first. The rains came and soaked into the campus, and the monotonous gray mornings in class in the too-warm buildings were conducive to things other than learning. At night the neon lights in Schuler Town reflected on the wet pavement as automobiles hissed up Dickson street toward the highway. After three weeks of intermittent downpour the rain stopped. The weather turned cold and then warm and the authorities on Ozark weather said that Fayetteville wouldn't see snow this year. Students began clearing out their crowded closets and sending their heavy winter clothes down the mountain and across the state to home. Short-sleeve shirts began to appear on the campus and a few students dug into bureaus for their summer cords, but they were rushing the season.

It began the night before finals. By morning Dickson and Maple streets were impassable and the city snowplows were busy trying to keep the highways open. Fayetteville schoolchildren sold their sleds to the highest bidders and organized snowball fights raged over the campus. The students who waited by radiators for their winter clothes to be mailed back from home learned that Fayetteville weather is unpredictable.

The Legislative Audit committee reviewed the University's books and found a $5,000 discrepancy in funds. An embarrassed administration offered excuses for the benefit of downstate paper and hurriedly began making plans for a revision of the outdated accounting procedures currently used.

The floor of the accident-prone new Fieldhouse was swept and polished the afternoon before the opening home basketball game, and athletic department officials hoped that the troublesome building was finally ready. Two hours before game time, however, the giant scoreboard suspended from the ceiling came loose from its moorings and crashed to the floor. Later during the month the Fieldhouse was officially dedicated without mishap, but all during basketball season spectators peered apprehensively at the ceiling of the mammoth structure and cheered with caution.

The Union juke box alternated between "Sixteen Tons" and "Lisbon Antiqua," and students waited in line at the Ozark theatre downtown to see Frank Sinatra writhe and Kim Novak wriggle in "The Man with the Golden Arm."

There was nothing extraordinary from November through March, but the months marked the last of 1955 and the first of a new year, and the winter was full of the interest of simplicity and activity.

YAWNING, a student waits to talk to faculty advisor at semester registration.

Set the alarm for seven

From eight to five during the week, sometimes later and occasionally longer, members of the faculty lecture and demonstrate, explain and discuss, and generally strive to impart particular bits of knowledge to the students in their various classes. It's not a simple task. When not in class, professors listen to students with preposterous excuses for poor grades during the semester or failure to attend class; they work with the slower students and reiterate fundamentals that were offered earlier in the semester. Some students sleep through classes and damn professors for four years. They drift through the University without exploring the fascinating byways of an academic world that hold as much or more interest than the courses in their chosen field. To be aware of the diversity is encouraging to the student, and to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the diversity is an experience in itself.

A soft roar of mumbles

This year the old Fieldhouse was delicately christened "the men's gymnasium." And though the name connotes dirty sweat socks and similar athletic accoutrements, the men's gym is still used as a concert ball, auditorium and ballroom for all-school functions.

Twice a year the doors of the men's gym are thrown open for the wonder of registration. People mill around for hours, and the soft roar of many mumbles settles over the giant room. With all of its lines, checking stations, files and blank forms, registration is a masterpiece of over-organization.

SHUFFLING class cards, instructors check each students schedule, investigate the size of the section applied for, and create an unavoidable bottleneck.

WORRIED, a graduate student talks to his advisor about courses and ignores the "no smoking" rule in men's gym.

TIRED after a day of counselling and planning schedules, Graduate Dean Virgil Adkisson waits for the next student.

CONFUSED students push their way between long tables and search for their advisors, colleges and the correct lines to pick up class cards.

WAITING for her date, a coed stands and watches the heavy snow that lured students away from their studies.

SATURDAY afternoons during winter were spent by talking, playing records, as by Little Rock Pi Phi Kathy Gran.

BASKETBALL games, with their crowded stands, lobbies milling with people, provided diversion during the evenings.

Phonographs, movies, basketball

Winter in Fayetteville is often characterized by snow. It snowed this year, but there was not so much snow as there was rain. After football season students rediscovered the length of Saturday afternoons, gray and wet and almost as lonely as Sunday. They passed the time crowded into the Tee Table, or preparing next week's assignments in a room either too warm or too cold, or occasionally visiting someone in a house across the campus. Basketball provided noisy entertainment during the week and the theatres continuously offered students a wide range of vicarious adventure.

MOVIES downtown and in the chemistry auditorium provided attractive entertainment for students with idle time.

COFFEE TIME at the Student Union found bundled-up students coming down the walk and descending the steps into the grill with extreme caution.

SNOWGIRL was made in front of their house by Pi Phi and dates, appropriately identified with arrow.

WARY STUDENT stops to let scholars sled by on the ice-covered walk down the hill. Sleds were at a premium during the snow season.

Slick streets and bitter mornings

TIRE CHAINS were pulled out of trunks and fastened in place with more than trouble, but travel on streets was impossible without them.

Affinity for snow is usually short-lived in Fayetteville. Students look forward to the first fall of the year with a reserved but curious anticipation. When the snow finally comes, with slick streets and bitter mornings, the curiosity of the anticipation is replaced with the wonder of the change. After a few weeks of slush and snowballs the novelty is gone and people begin liking summer again.

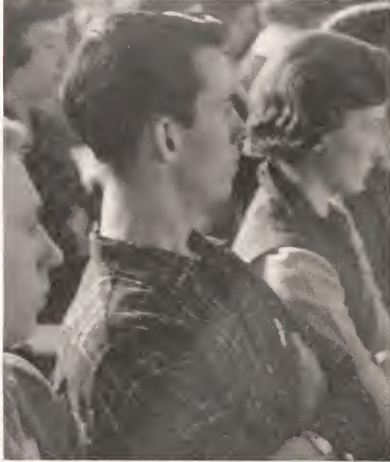

ARKANSAS AVENUE after the first fall of light snow was clean and wet, and was not hazardous to driving. The street became more dangerous as the week progressed and the snow continued, and wise students moved cars from curbs until snow was gone.

THE WALK from Old Main to Dickson street, despite the efforts of Building and Grounds, remained covered with ice for several weeks, forced students to detour.

An emphasis on religion

Religious Emphasis Week this year revolved around the theme, "Do you have the answer?" Directed by Jim Blair and Nancy McDonald, REW represented the efforts of dozens of student committees to provide the campus with a week of talks, lectures and seminars concerning current religious thought. Convocations were held at 11:00 every morning in the Student Union ballroom with talks by religious leaders from various parts of the United States. Seminars were conducted during the afternoon and organized houses participated in informal "bull sessions" with speakers after the evening meal.

Few students professed to have the "answer" the theme of the week asked for, but the majority of the student body participated in the activities of a week that is annually set aside to emphasize and provoke thought on religion and the Christian society.

SINGING hymns at the beginning of NEW convocation, students use mimeographed sheets of music passed out before eleven o'clock meeting in the Union.

BALLROOM in Student Union was filled to capacity for convocation, chairs were provided for the overflow crowd on balcony.

ATTENDING the first convocation of the week, David Pryor and Bill Huff chat as the ballroom fills up before the start of services.

SIGNS were placed by campus walks and drives to remind students of the week of religious services.

Parties: Crepe paper and a desire

Parties are the opiate of the student. Popping up in some form or another every weekend, organized or otherwise, parties sometimes reflect imagination and originality (formals, costume parties and dances), sometimes nothing at all (the weekend bash). The Greeks and organized houses spend months preparing for their formals — planning decorations and invitations, writing bands, planning budgets, collecting tools and nails and crepe paper — and then finish with the final arrangements a few minutes before the reception. The weekend house parties and picnics are another matter. Sometimes planned, often spur-of-the-minute, the parties reflect, if anything, enthusiasm and a strong desire to participate.

In the Fieldhouse: Dedication and honors

The new Fieldhouse has had its troubles. Several weeks of construction on the building were lost due to strikes and delays; when the superstructure was finally completed it collapsed and killed one of the workers and seriously injured others. The afternoon before the first game in the Fieldhouse the scoreboard came loose from the ceiling and crashed onto the floor. After several weeks of waiting and watching, the administration officially dedicated the new building with hopes that its troubles were over. It appeared that they were. Arkansas defeated TCU that night for a first-place tie with SMU in the Southwest Conference.

Glen Rose, who has coached Arkansas basketball teams for 13 years, was honored later in the season when the February 18 game with Texas was declared "Glen Rose Night." Approximately 40 members of former Razorback teams attended the game and presented Rose with a scroll at halftime, naming him "Mr. Basketball of the Southwest Conference." That was a good night in the Fieldhouse, too. Arkansas beat the Longhorns 79-69.

RAFAEL MENDEZ, one of the world's finest trumpet artists, played with University concert band to a crowd of 1,200 in Union ballroom.

DUKE ELLINGTON was brought to the campus in March by the Student Senate entertainment committee.

CREW CUTS, appearing with Paul Neighbors, sang to a packed men's gym in February. The group was part of artists and concerts series.

A full program of entertainment

REACTION to the Crew Cuts by the large crowd showed an overwhelming appreciation.

The University annually provides the community with a full program of high-caliber entertainment. In October the Robert Shaw Chorale and the Dave Brubeck Quartet were presented in the men's gym. Rafael Mendez was brought to the campus in February, a few weeks after a performance by Eugene Conley, Metropolitan Opera tenor. The Tulsa symphony orchestra appeared at the University in March, followed by a concert by Duke Ellington. The highlight of the year was the Salzburg Morzarteum in the concert hall of the Fine Arts Center.

STUDENTS WAITED in line to see the numerous first-run movies brought to Fayetteville by the local theatres.

SPRING

Spring: Burn a happy light

The rain pelted down on the roof of the Fieldhouse and rattled against the skylights during the rehearsal of the Campus Capers skits. It was a dreary Friday afternoon and very few students remembered that it was April Fool's day. That night the rain slowed down to a slow drizzle, but it was still wet and some people even said the weather was miserable. The organized houses presented their skits to a full house, however, and the Civic club was surprised and pleased at the attendance. When the Traveler came out the next Tuesday, it called the show "an outstanding success," despite the fact that the show ran an hour and a half overtime. That was in April. By the end of the month the skies had cleared and the students began talking about campus politics instead of the weather. It was too early to talk about studies; finals were more than a month away.

Even with the expected wet beginning it was a rather unusual spring. At the outset politics looked more like a sweepstakes than an election—everybody wanted to run for something. Even a transfer student filed for the top office. But instead of touring houses and making speeches, the transfer student set up shop on the library steps and played a guitar and sang hillbilly songs. He was elected president of the student body by the third largest majority in the history of University politics. The students sat in the Union and drank coffee—only some were drinking iced tea, now—and talked about their new president and listened to the juke box blare "Papa Loves Mambo." The program chairmen of the organized houses, meanwhile, racked their brains and exhausted their files in an attempt to find Gaebale skits that would be acceptable to the administration and yet still be considered funny. Inasmuch as they succeeded was no less as surprising to them as it probably was to the administration.

Finals slipped up and bludgeoned the student body. Red eyes and stifled yawns in class belied the long nights spent in concentrated study, disdainfully referred to as "cramming" by professors, and instant coffee made with hot tap water was hard to swallow on an empty stomach, but coffee is a tradition of finals and sometimes it's necessary to suffer discomfort to preserve Tradition.

Both ends of the candle burned brightly last spring; the candle gave more than the poetic lovely light—it was an ambitious, happy light, and it reflected the thought and curiosity of four fast years. Years that result not so much in an intrinsic omniscience as an inherent understanding.

GAEBALE provided diversion and amusement before forthcoming finals.

MINSTREL MEN rehearse their cues backstage before the original "Riverboat Days" skit presented by the group from Acacia fraternity and Carnall hall.

APPLYING MAKEUP was an important last minute chore before going on stage.

SONG AND DANCE routines were featured in the Tri-Delta, Phi Delt presentation, one of the three blackface skits offered.

Blackface, music and dollars for charity

PROGRAMMING and arranging the skits was done by Preston Magruder and Dean Brown during the afternoon before the show.

Campus Capers, the culmination of the Civic club's annual Campus Chest drive, was attended by some two and a half thousand students and the charity show grossed over $1,500, which was indicative of the entire drive. The Civic club kicked off the drive with an unheard-of breakfast dance, prepared for 200 people and was swamped by four times that many. It was a good year for charity.

AFTERNOON REHEARSALS were slow and tiresome; the background noises of groups waiting their turn added to the confusion of the people on the stage. Above, the Kappa Sigs and Holcombe girls practice a dance number.

FRED WARNER, in appropriate blackface, white gloves and string tie, sang in the SAE-KKG skit.

GUYS AND MOLLS provided theme for the Sigma Nu and Zeta Tau Alpha score.

VENDING PEANUTS for charity, undertaken by President Caldwell and other administration personnel, utilized traditional high-pressure tactics, produced good sales volume.

PRESTON MACGRUDER supervised work on the final staging details before the curtain went up on the first of the nine productions of the night.

MODERN DANCE routine was presented by followers of the art in Pi Beta Phi and PiKA skit.

ENGINEER'S DAY heralded beard-growing contests, St. Pat candidates. Above, Lyle Gilbert is doused as agriculture students win annual tug-o'-war.

PRESS CLUB spring banquet speaker was Ernie Dean, who is now editor for the Arkansas Gazette.

BUSINESS STUDENTS packed BA auditorium to hear a forum on the growth of industry in Arkansas.

AGRI DAY was carefully planned and quite successful. Rodeo during the afternoon was attended by the largest crowd in several years.

MORTAR BOARD tapped Kay Trumbo and other new members at the annual AWS spring festival.

Friday is a day of rest

Commerce Day was held on a Friday and the dean of the college dismissed classes for that day so his students could forget the strains of marketing and retailing and enjoy the holiday. The students assembled at the college at 8 a.m. (many for the first and only time) and proceeded to enjoy the result of months of committee-work, correspondence and planning. They enjoyed their day just like the Agri students, who romped and roped all afternoon at their rodeo, or the law students, who haggled legal questions and wept to a jury most of their day. They worked. And they worked harder on that one day than many of them did in a week of classes. Friday was a good day for a holiday . . . they could relax over the weekend.

LAWYERS' DAY was highlighted by a murder trial in law school's moot court. The Right Honorable Fred Pickens occupied the bench.

Parties are for weekends

This year it was different. The onetime successful Razorback party tried all of the maneuvers that had worked so well before, but it just couldn't get off the ground. At their fund-raising banquet the Razorback party lambasted the new Student party with fiery oratory, then found it necessary to join forces with them when both suffered a dearth of candidates for minor offices.

Most of the Greek houses formed a coalition and called themselves the "Independent" party. When all was said and done, the Razorbacks were left at the post, the Independents swept the senate, but both parties missed the big bandwagon. The two top offices went to unaffiliated candidates; one smiled and sang songs, the other smiled and shook hands. Both left two badly shaken parties in their wake; one was sick and the other 'most dead.

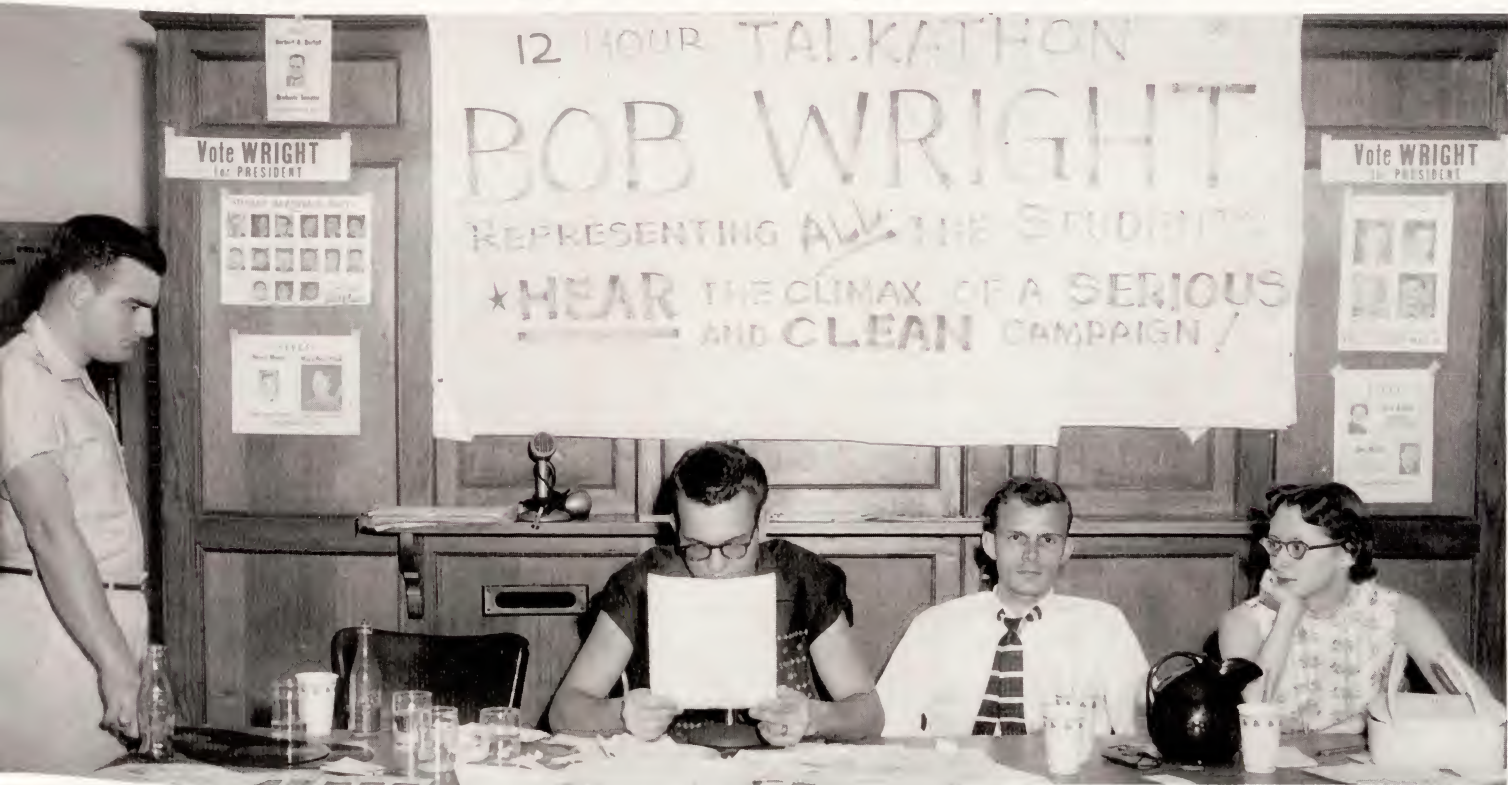

POLITICAL PARTIES worked feverishly for support from groups and factions as well as the individual. Most students cast votes in both primaries.

OLIVER SAT and glowered during a pro-Thornton rally after he had accepted an invitation to speak to voters.

THORNTON SANG hillbilly songs and made speeches during his daily rallies on front steps of the library.

WRIGHT TALKED for twelve consecutive hours the day before the election in an attempt to gain support for himself and the Razor-back party. Bob Griffin, next to Wright, fired questions and Mrs. Wright passed out campaign cards. Ed Patterson handled publicity.

An enlightened electorate

In the spring of 1953 the political Outs pulled themselves together again for the seasonal foray into campus politics. They dusted off the platform they had lost with the year before, chose a new name for their party and looked around for a gimmick. The gimmick was most important. Without the gimmick, their campaign would have the same flavor and appeal as the campaign of the Ins, which was somewhat less than desirable, since the only people that followed the usual campaigns on the campus were the candidates. The Outs, who had christened themselves the Razorback party, found their gimmick and smothered their opposition. The Outs denounced the formerly-used caucus method of nominating candidates, and they beat the drum for their gimmick: The party primary.

Last spring Ray Thornton went the parties and the primary system one better. He denounced parties while standing on the library steps strumming his guitar.

Resurrection of a faded clown

Gaebale picked up its feet last spring and finally began to dance again. The varsity show offered a colorful variety of skits to a receptive audience in the Greek theatre and loudspeakers on the midway boomed preposterous claims of shows that were boisterous, bawdy or banned. Russ Morgan played to an applauding and hilarious crowd at the Gaebale Ball, and the campus was flushed with conviviality. Veterans of some years on the campus reluctantly confided that Gaebale was almost as good as it used to be, but they were wrong. Gaebale never was what it used to be. Some people have said that it hasn't been for several years, but it never really was.

VARSAITY SHOW was held in the Greek Theatre, featured various skits and short acts. Hula dancer Lettie Kane, above, was one of the most popular.

GAEBALE BOOTHS were hurriedly constructed in the hot Saturday morning sun. These Kappas painted furiously on facade for KKG-Sigma Nu booth, barely finished for midway opening.

HEAT AND FATIGUE were evident during late afternoon: Shirley Elswick tries to relax between DG-Phi Delt shows.

SILENT MOVIE, "Birth of a Notion," produced by Tri-Delta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, drew largest attendance.

BALLYHOO jarred the nerves of the crowd as the Kappa Sig-Chio and PiKA-ZTA booths competed for customers.

MEDIEVAL TIMES and untold history provided the theme of the Sigma Chi-Holcombe show as James Holt portrayed depraved King Henry VIII.

REFRESHMENT STAND was busiest corner of midway. Students returned many times to buy cold drinks or ice for people that sweltered in the roofless booths.

REHEARSALS for beauty show, directed by emcee Bob Evans, were held during Campus Fair.

BEAUTY SHOW crowd was large and enthusiastic, despite threat of rain during the day. Strong winds toppled the throne of 1954's Miss University of Arkansas, elicited shouts of "God save the queen!" from students.

STUDENT BAND, directed by Tom Whittaker, provided appropriate music for the entire program.

CARD CATALOGUE, a cross-index file of the library's 300,000 books, is used by Henry Broach to find books and periodicals for a term paper.

The pressure before the end of the year was firmly anchored by finals and nights of study. Notes were read and re-read and the cigarette people were the only ones that realized profit. Warm, balmy nights offered a promise of something more than four hours with a book on economics and risk bearing, and students that were somewhat less than diligent or more than confident drove to Springdale to see MGM's first Cinemascope musical, "Rose Marie", which crowded Ann Blyth and Howard Keel onto the Apollo theatre's new wide screen.

RELAXING in the shade, Ann Harper watches construction activity on the Gaebale midway. The mid-morning sun gave notice of the hot summer months that were to follow.

SUMMER

Summer: Fair fishing, color tv

The campus is populated in the summer with school teachers working on various degrees and desperate undergraduates trying to garner enough hours to graduate. The afternoons are long and hot, and the occasional rains are separated by periods of several weeks.

The summer soil is dry and baked in Northwest Arkansas; the chicken farmers gather in little groups on the square downtown during the mornings and talk about how the heat affects their broods, and the fruit farmers complain about the condition of their orchards. The business district is slow with most of the student trade home for the summer and, like almost every other small town in Arkansas, the stores close at noon on Wednesday.

The undergraduates on the campus that are so inclined watch the afternoons drift by from a booth at George's, air-conditioned and

STUDENT UNION was virtually deserted during the summer, coffee was replaced by iced tea and the Arkansas Gazette replaced the morning Traveler.

SUMMER SCHOOL had little meaning for children that attended the University grade school in the fall. Their vacation was a full three months spent playing around the campus and on the wagon and other playground equipment.

resplendent with color television. Fishing is fair in the lakes and streams around Fayetteville, the golf courses are always crowded, but study is avoided. It's too hot to study in the afternoons.

Summertime is clean-up time at the University. The little green fences that are haphazardly thrown across the campus are repaired and mended and touched up where students have refused to abandon old paths across the mall and damage the fence on trips to class. Classrooms are painted, apparently with whatever color happens to be handy, and the fraternities and sororities prop up their walls and hide broken furniture in anticipation of rush week.

The campus is quiet in the summer and has a fresh, clean smell when classes begin at 7:00 in the morning. The air grows heavier and warmer as the day progresses and the classrooms become increasingly uncomfortable. There's time for a nap after lunch; the tennis courts are crowded by late afternoon. By early August most students begin to look forward to fall, the excitement of rush week, the noise of football and 50 minute classes again. The summer session is fine in the morning, but the afternoons are hot.

TENNIS and other similar sports filled the long summer afternoons without classes.

CHIOS Mary Frances Williams, Tene Wolfe and Ebie Mitchell enjoy the antics of Don Edmondson on an outing.

STUDYING for examinations during the summer is a chore. The main library takes on a ghost-like atmosphere and the difficulty of concentration is increased by heat.

ACCOUNTING and other required courses are usually taken by summer school students. The accelerated class schedule and light requirement for semester hours, in addition to the relative absence of extra-curricular activities, gives students more time to study.

SUMMER sessions attract high school teachers working on advanced degrees and students trying to compile enough hours to graduate the following year.

DISCONSOLATE Chi Omega, Virginia Ann Hill, sees another hectic, tiring rush week approaching as the Chios begin their summer rush program with an outing and picnic for the rushees.

EXCITED about their forthcoming year at the University, freshman girls picnic on the hill above the Stadium drive during a visit to the University campus before registration.

ART CLASSES were popular electives for students who couldn't otherwise work the courses into their schedules.

LANDMARK of the campus, empty during most of the summer, is the band building with its entrance in the attic.

STUDENT UNION throws a cold light on miniature dunes of snow on the Maple street terrace.

ADMINISTRATION

SEVERAL University students assisted Orval Faubus in his successful campaign during the summer of 1954, and the Governor has visited the campus on a number of occasions since the election. Working with administration officials and the Board of Trustees, the Governor plays an important part in directing business and affairs of the University.

Orval E. Faubus

Governor of Arkansas

Serving his second year in his term as Governor of the State of Arkansas, Orval E. Faubus was born and raised in nearby Madison County, educated in Arkansas and served in World War II.

A member of the Baptist Church, the Masonic Lodge, a 32nd degree Mason, Governor Faubus is publisher of the Madison County Record and has served as postmaster of Huntsville, state highway director, administrative assistant to the governor under Sidney McMath, and county clerk before his successful campaign for governor. Despite his busy schedule, Governor Faubus was often in the stands during the Razorback football season and crowned the 1955 Homecoming Queen.

ORVAL FAUBUS appeared on the University campus three years ago when he began his campaign for governor. His speech, sponsored by the ACPL, attracted an interested audience.

Board of Trustees

The University of Arkansas Board of Trustees is the official policy-making body of the University. The board members are appointed by the governor to serve staggered terms of ten years each. The board meets upon call of the president of the University or the chairman of the board and decides on questions of general University policy. Members of the board are: Judge H. S. Yokum, El Dorado, chairman; Wylie Jones, Madison; Paul Sullins, Crossett; L. C. Carter, Stuttgart; Baron Lange, Little Rock; Miss Pauline Hoeltzel, Little Rock; Fred Pickens, Newport; Roy Ritter, Springdale; Dr. Preston Hathcock, Fayetteville; Jack Stephens, Little Rock.

Dr. CALDWELL combines an ambition for progress in the University with a personal interest in students to create a cordial atmosphere of industry in his offices.

John Tyler Caldwell

President of the University

John Tyler Caldwell came to the University of Arkansas four years ago from Alabama College in Montevallo. He accepted the job as president of a university that was to begin a sudden and rapid growth, and with revisions in control and organization within the administration he has managed to keep his office cognizant of the problems of the University — from the Business Office level to the student affairs on a personal basis.

Dr. Caldwell holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Mississippi State College, Master of Arts degrees from Duke University and Columbia University. He received his Ph. D. from Princeton University in 1939. In the spring of 1954, Dr. Caldwell took a leave of absence to serve as Educational Consultant to the Ministry of Education for the Ford Foundation in Pakistan.

A native southerner, Dr. Caldwell is married and has three children.

Vice-President and Treasurer

Vice-President in charge of Finances, T. C. Carlson heads the Business Office of the University, which controls all finances of the University at Fayetteville, the School of Medicine at Little Rock, various state agricultural experiment stations and the Agricultural Extension Service at Little Rock. His duties concern purchasing, budget control, receipt and disbursement of funds, accounting and financial reports, auditing, and the supervision of the many business enterprises involved in operating the University.

The University income is derived from sources including student fees, appropriations made by the federal government. This year it was discovered that the accounting procedures used by the University were far inadequate for the size of the school, and a study for revision of procedures was begun under the direction of the treasurer's office.

T. C. CARLSON
Vice-President and Treasurer

LEWIS H. ROHRBAUGH
Vice-President and Provost

Vice-President and Provost

In his capacity as vice-president, Dr. Lewis H. Rohrbaugh is second in command for the University; as provost he is responsible for all the colleges, schools and related organizations and activities of the main campus.

With more than a quarter century of experience in educational administration, Dr. Rohrbaugh came to the position here from the American Council on Education in Washington, D. C. For the two years previous, on loan from the Department of Agriculture to the State Department, he had been chief of the first Point 4 Mission to Iraq, headquartered in Baghdad.

Dr. Rohrbaugh received a Ph. D. from Dickinson College, with majors in biology and psychology. His graduate work, philosophy and anthropology, was taken at Cornell University and the University of Pennsylvania; his post-doctoral work was public administration and agricultural economics. He holds the Ph. D. and Sc. D.

MARX PALES conducts the University-Fayetteville Symphony Orchestra in a rehearsal of Haydn's "Creation" that was presented here in late March.

GUERDON D. NICHOLS
Dean of Arts and Sciences

Arts and Sciences

Not all of the students who enroll in the College of Arts and Sciences are there to try to make Phi Beta Kappa, the highest honorary. Some are merely trying to get one of the school's six degrees — B.A., B.S., B.M., A.S. in S.W., as well as the two-year associate degrees. The choice of these students in this largest and most inclusive school of the University ranges from architecture to zoology.

The man who manages to hold all these departments together is Dean Guerdon D. Nichols, a native Iowan with degrees from Iowa and Nebraska Universities.

AGRI STUDENTS Charles Adams, Alonzo Metcalf and George Carruth examine the final results of an experiment with plant blight.

Agriculture and Home Economics

LIPPERT S. ELLIS

Dean of Agriculture and Home Economics

The one day of the year when President Caldwell dons overalls and red bandana is Agri day, when the only people not in overalls are the engineers, who wear blue jeans and fight with everybody who wears overalls. Agri day cops off a year of hard classroom work for both future farmers and future housewives, for somewhere along the line someone decided that the farm and the house go hand in hand. One can receive the B.S. degree in agriculture and home economics here, and a very diligent student might even make Alpha Zeta or Phi Upsilon Omicron, the two honor societies.

Dean Lippert S. Ellis, who has worn overalls every Agri day since he became dean in 1946, was born on a Michigan farm, and received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin.

POINTING out a proper keyboard procedure, Assistant Professor Doris Cook assists Roberta Crow in one of the business machine lab courses.

PAUL W. MILAM
Dean of Business Administration

Business Administration

The College of Business Administration offers around fifty specialized courses to pick from, as well as the myriad of vague and general courses that confront the bewildered freshmen and transfers from the engineering school. Those drowsy winter days in a lecture room or a business machine laboratory are wiped off the slate in the spring with the unbusinesslike outburst that takes place on Commerce day, when, among other things, the school elects its Commerce Queen.

Dean Paul W. Milam, an Arkansan who went to New York University for his doctorate and returned to his native state to use it, presides over it all.

ELEMENTARY education major Johnie Faye Mitchell tries to confine the attention of her Peabody Hall class to geography.

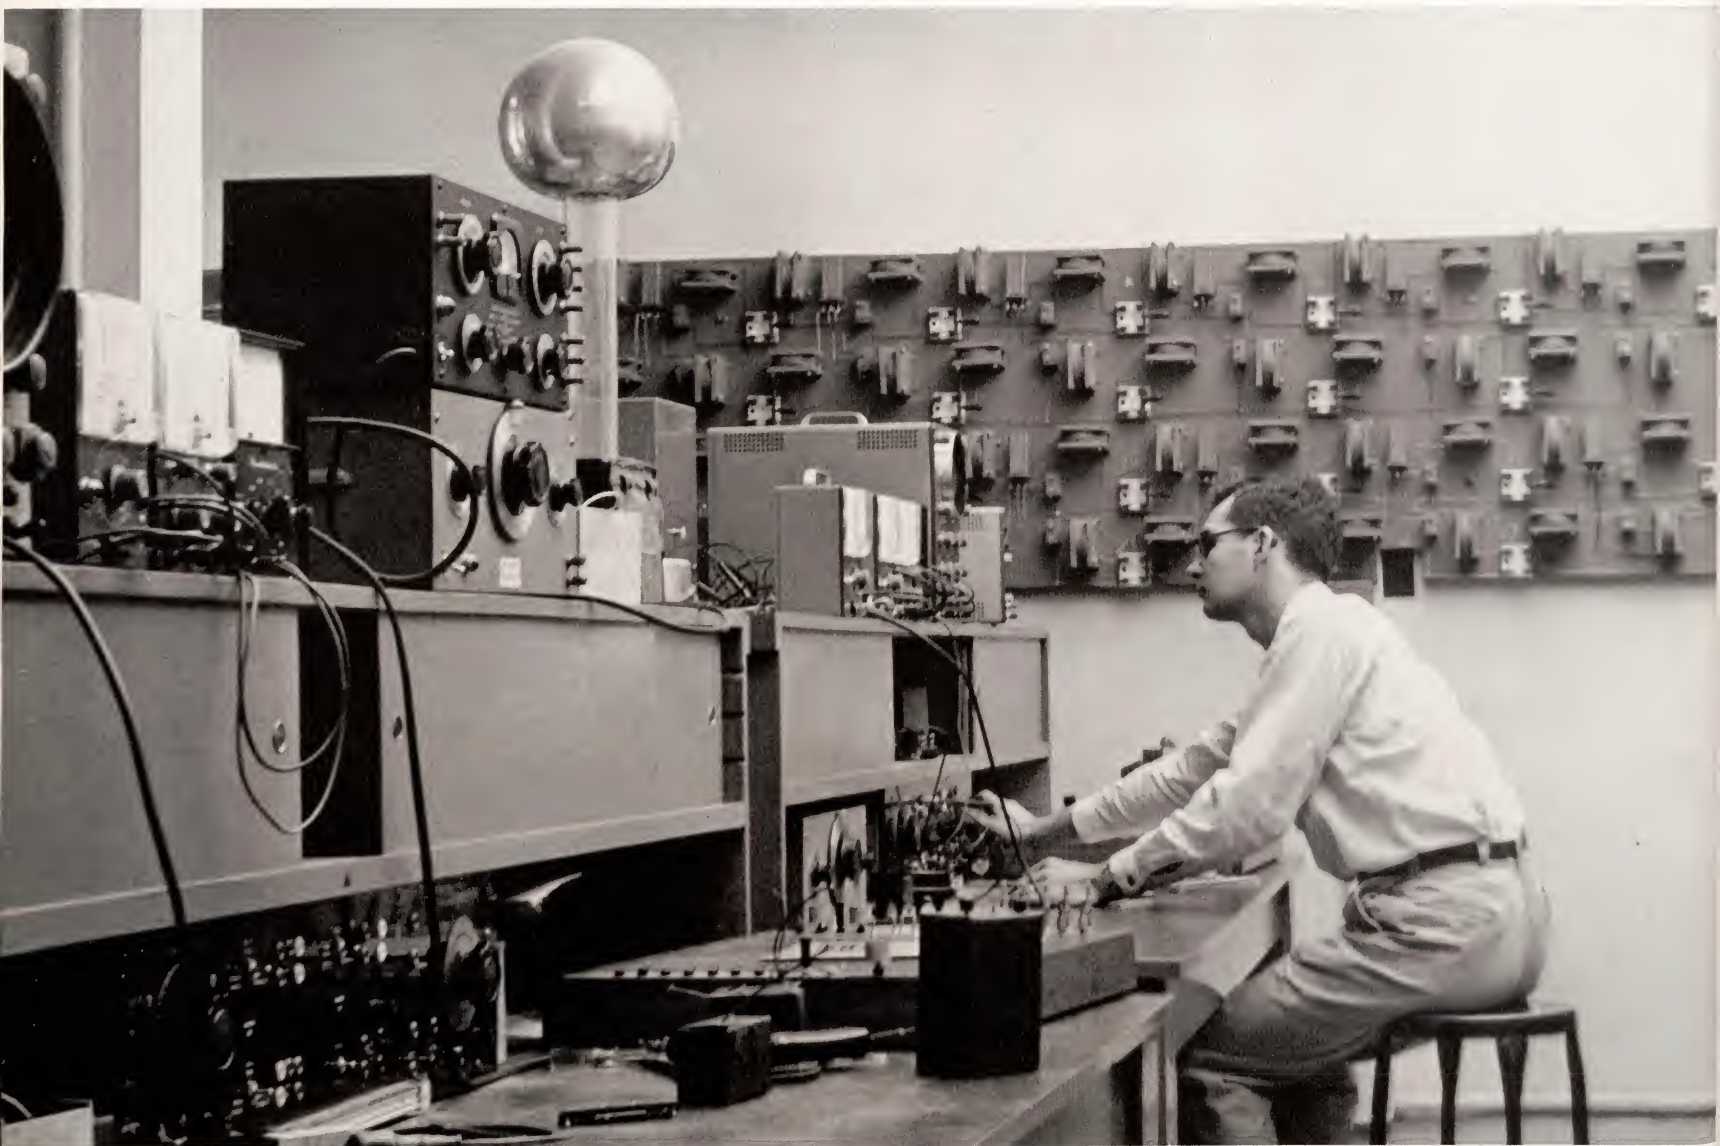

College of Education

HENRY H. KRONENBERG
Dean of Education

Some of the most wanted graduates of the University are its student teachers, who are taught what and how to teach in the College of Education. These future teachers get their practical education in a grade school and high school maintained by the college in Peabody Hall. They have a chance to specialize in various fields, from home economics to industrial education. The more educated of the future educators may qualify for Kappa Delta Pi, the honorary society. The Teacher's Placement Bureau gives a good job guarantee to graduates.

Dean Henry H. Kronenberg, who heads the Education College, is a graduate of Illinois College, and he received his doctorate from Minnesota University.

EXPERIMENT in electronics is studied by a student in one of the College's electrical engineering laboratories in the Engine building.

College of Engineering

GEORGE F. BRANIGAN
Dean of Engineering

Tau Beta Pi is the highest honorary in the College of Engineering, but very few engineers have that society as their goal. The ambition utmost in the mind of an engineering student is to get a degree, in which he may take his choice of six fields — agricultural, civil, chemical, electrical, mechanical and industrial engineering. They quit worrying about graduating for one week — Engineers' week — when they elect a St. Pat and St. Patricia, paint as much concrete green as possible, and shave the heads of anyone who doesn't grow a beard.

Dean George Branigan, who has grown beards along with the rest a few times, has a degree from the University of Nebraska, and a masters from Kansas State. He came to the University from Iowa State.

VIRGIL W. ADKISSON
Dean of Graduate School

Graduate School

Whether or not a student gets a M.A. or Ph.D. is all a matter of time, but how much time it takes depends on (1) the student and (2) the Graduate school. The roughest, if the smallest, school on the campus, the grad college began back in 1927 with 34 hardy students. Dean Virgil Adkisson took the school over in 1949 on the retirement of Dean Clark Jordan. In 1950, the doctoral program was started, and since then 36 doctoral degrees — 22 Ed.D. and 12 Ph.D. — have been granted. Dean Adkisson, who came to the University from the University of Pennsylvania, was formerly head of the mathematics department.

JOE E. COVINGTON
Dean of Law

Law School

No one ever sees the lights go out in the law library. Maybe that's because the students in the Law School are all in love with their work, or maybe the famous library has a mysterious fascination, but most of the young men thrive on it, whether they like it or not. The law students live on a steady diet of moot court cases and clashes with various out-dated regulations. Every spring they crawl out of their bright chamber and throw off their cares in one big Lawyer's day, when they feast on a banquet, and, of all things, set up another moot court trial.

Dean Joe E. Covington has been through all of this himself. He was graduated from the Law School in 1940, when no one ever saw the law library.

NURSING students Diane Huie, Pat Osburn and Anne Nowell practice making a bed, a universally accepted requirement for nursing.

School of Nursing

JULIA M. MILLER
Dean of Nursing

The School of Nursing went into its third year at the University this year, and those who studied in it the first year are now entering the University Medical Center at Little Rock. The schedule for a student nurse calls for two years on the Fayetteville campus acquiring a basic education, followed by two years at the Medical Center at Little Rock in the specialized field of Nursing. The Center, just being finished at a cost of fourteen million dollars, is one of the most modern in the world. Dean Julia M. Miller is head of this newest school of the University.

DEAN OF STUDENTS D. Whitney Halladay, a native Californian and former major in the infantry, came to the University of Arkansas from Teachers College at Columbia University, N. Y., where he received his doctorate.

PLANNING day's activities, Dean Halladay is advised of appointments by office secretary, Mrs. King.

Division of Student Affairs

The Division of Student Affairs was formed in September "in order more effectively to meet the significant and imperative out-of-class needs of students," explained University President John Tyler Caldwell. D. Whitney Halladay, who this year replaced John Shoemaker as Dean of Men, was named Dean of Students and placed in charge of the new organizational unit. Mary Eleanor Tyler, who succeeded Jeanette Scudder as Dean of Women, received the title of Associate Dean of Students and Dean of Women.

The unit concerns the administration of student counseling and advising, food services, housing, student activities, student aid and the facilities of the Student Union.

ELEANOR TYLER, Associate Dean of Students and Dean of Women, is from Ohio, received her degree and a professional diploma from Teachers College, Columbia University, New York.

ASSISTING Dean Halladay in the direction of the Division of Student Affairs, Dean Tyler helps Vernon Reed, a student from Springfield, Mo., and Mrs. King plan the program for a debate tournament to be held at the University.

SNOW and ice covered the campus and streets during the winter, making automobile transportation either dangerous or impossible. By necessity, most dates consisted of walks to the Union or to the Chemistry building for free movies.

PERSONALITIES

Student Government

The Associated Students, composed of the entire student body at the University, is the organization through which the student government operates. Officers for the student body are elected in the spring for the following school year after a great amount of campaigning. The vice-president, secretary, and the treasurer serve as officers of the Student Senate, the legislative branch of the student government.

The Student Senate is composed of representatives from the colleges of the University and various student organizations. The senators are either elected in the spring general election or appointed by the president of the Associated Students. In addition to several other projects which include the student entertainment committee, the Senate sponsors the University's Southwest conference sportsmanship program.

The president of the student body formulates the policies of student government and is moderator of the Student-Faculty forum, which is composed of student body and administrative officials and meets monthly to discuss the problems and policies of the campus community.

SENATE MEMBERS David McDonald, Dean Brown, Kenny Danforth and David Minton discuss Senate committee business over late coffee.

The Student Senate began the year with a controversial topic concerning the "AA" Club's selling beanies to the freshmen at registration. The sales were at first revoked completely, but after further investigation the senate reversed its decision. The senate asked for and received a new schedule for hours for the library during testing periods, and signed the Cell Block Seven for the annual Porker Party through the entertainment committee. Duke Ellington was brought to the campus for a concert.

Constitutional amendments, which would allow the group to pay its officers a salary, and also set up a plan for compiling a Senate Digest, were placed on the ballot for the general election.

John H. Barnhill graduated in 1928 from the University of Tennessee where he was an All-Southeastern Conference guard and an outstanding member of the track team. He came to the University of Arkansas in 1946 as head football coach and served in this capacity until 1949 when he was elevated to the post of Director and Professor of Athletics. Since his advent to this position, the athletic program of the University has been securely placed on a sound basis, both physically and financially.

Jack Mitchell, serving his first year as head football coach, was born in Arkansas City, Kansas. He attended the University of Oklahoma, played quarterback in the Sooner split T and in 1948 was named All-American. Mitchell was head football coach at Wichita University before coming to the University of Arkansas.

Glen Rose has served 13 years (in a split-tenure) as head basketball coach for the Razorbacks. Prior to this year, his full-career mark for some 17 seasons was 259 wins against 113 losses — a winning percentage of .696. Only twice in 12 years has Rose coached a team that finished below third place. Eight of the 12 have been in first or second place. After his graduation from the University of Arkansas in 1928, Rose headed the cage program at Jonesboro Baptist Junior College one year. He then returned to coach freshmen at the University for four years. While freshman coach, he received his MA degree before being called into the Army. Upon completion of his Army duty, Rose coached four seasons at Stephen F. Austin College in Texas before returning to his alma mater.

Jack Mitchell: Start from Scratch

One Saturday evening in January, 1955, Bowden Wyatt, who had been attending the National Collegiate Athletic Association meeting in New York, stepped off his train in St. Louis and placed calls to the Arkansas press. Arkansas writers heard what they had feared: Wyatt had resigned as the Razorbacks' head football coach and had been hired by his alma mater, the University of Tennessee.

Thus the stage was set for a whale of coach-hiring job by Athletic Director John Barnhill. He came through with a good hand, 31-year-old Jack Mitchell, head grid master at Wichita University. Mitchell made a secret visit to the UA campus and both parties liked what they saw and in less than a week the deal had been sealed.

The University of Oklahoma graduate had always known athletic success, and his first year on the hill was no exception. The Porkers finished with a 5-4-1 record under his guidance. Mitchell faced three distinct major problems: the change from the single wing formation to the split T, satisfying the appetites of Hog followers after a championship Cotton Bowl season, and the rugged challenge presented by top-flight Southwest Conference competition.

The first of these was paramount. The players were well briefed on single wing actions, reactions and fundamentals. General Jack (his nickname as an all-American quarterback at Oklahoma) told the team at the start of spring practice:

"We've got to start from scratch — even with the lettermen. Virtually everything we require — except for desire, blocking, and tackling — will be different from what you learned last year. It means that we've not only got to learn new ways of doing things, but first — break down the habits you formed in the single wing. And, what makes it doubly tough is that your single wing play of 1954 was exceptionally good and well-grounded."

This problem was resolved, fans were satisfied and Mitchell proved equal in wits to the rest of the SWC.

Mitchell is a handsome, smiling young man with a magnetic personality. This personality quickly gained him the popularity of players, students, faculty and fans. He was successful as a recruiter.

Arkansas' 22nd football coach was born at Arkansas City, Kansas, December 3, 1923. Through public schools he lettered in football, basketball, track and tennis, and in high school was all-state in three of these sports. Mitchell entered the University of Texas in the fall of 1942, but after his freshman season was tabbed by Selective Service. He spent three years of Army and Air Corp duty, much of it in the European theatre. He was awarded the Air Medal with two clusters, the Presidential Citation and the Purple Heart.

Mitchell enrolled at Oklahoma as a psychology major in the fall of 1946 and that school's fortunes began to look up. He played the first year as a split T quarterback under Jim Tatum and the next two under Bud Wilkinson. He was rated All-Big Seven all three years and in 1948 was all-American.

The likeable chap picked up his AB degree in June, 1949, then moved to Blackwell, Oklahoma, to start his coaching career at the high school. He pooled morale, pro-like precision and the split T offense to guide the team out of the dark and to a 9-1 season. He moved to Tulsa as backfield coach for a year and then to Texas Tech for the same job for two years. Jack then shifted to Wichita as head man, led it to a 4-1 mark in 1953 and a 9-1 Missouri Valley Conference championship record the next season. So with the first Arkansas season thrown in the T-whiz has a 49-18-3 record as an assistant and head coach.

Mitchell is married to the former Jeanne Kincheloe. They have two sons, Jack, Jr., 6, and Judson, 1.

DONALD HORTON winces as the team physician inspects his injured ankle, while trainer Bill Ferrell and the Razorback bench watch the progress of the second team in the opening game of the season against Tulsa. The Razorbacks downed the Golden Hurricanes with a score of 21 to 6.

JACK MITCHELL looks over his players on the bench during a time-out in the tense SMU game at Dallas. Mitchell paced the sidelines continually during the Southwest Conference encounter, staff assistants phoned instructions down from the press box. It was a good day for Arkansas' new coach. The Razorbacks defeated the Mustangs 6-0.

SHOUTING above the crowd to ragged-jerseyed quarterback Don Christian, Mitchell calls for a new series of plays against SMU. The final conference game of the season, Southern Methodist was unable to score on the defense-conscious Razorback squad.

Football: Rumbles in the grandstand

Arkansas faced a mountainous challenge when athletic minds turned from a glorious past to stark reality after a championship and Cotton Bowl season of 1954. Hog partisans had only two weeks to wallow in that wonderful mire until the promising football program was interrupted. Two single wing seasons under Bowden Wyatt and the prospect of more lavish days exploded as violently as the Porkers against a pushover when the popular coach announced his resignation and move from the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas to the Smokies of Tennessee. Ozark folk didn't adjust quickly to the circumstances. Fans, students, interested alumni and even the players suffered a severe letdown in morale for almost a week. Then a young man with a quick smile and engaging personality bought Wyatt's Fayetteville home and started making friends — and eventually a football team. He was Jack Mitchell, a 31-year-old technician who had just produced a Missouri Valley Conference winner at Wichita University and was itching to get into the big time.

There were lots of problems to be faced by all the Arkansas folks. They were wary. They took a wait-and-see attitude toward the new regime and what caliber of product it would bring. Mitchell and his staff met the squad members and they became better acquainted. Jack poured hours over motion pictures of the 1954 team, trying to get a line on each player's capabilities. The stage finally was set for spring practice at the last of February.

THREE BEARS from Baylor combine their efforts to stop advancing halfback Don Horton as he is cut off from his interference in Arkansas' 20-25 loss on the Waco gridiron.

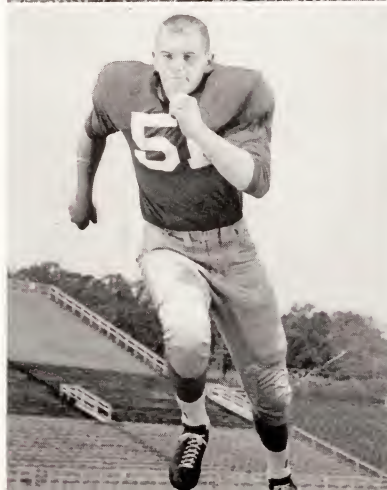

JAY DONATHAN, Ronnie Underwood and Don Christian hit the Horned Frog ball carrier to stop TCU at the Arkansas 10 yard line. Texas Christian scored a 26-0 victory over hustling but befuddled Razorbacks before 22,000 fans in Razorback stadium at Fayetteville.

BILLY LYONS JAY DONATHAN

The first day was a nice one weather-wise but that's as far as it went. The quarterbacks, George Walker, Don Christian, Tommy Lockhart and Glen Wood, fumbled two-thirds of snap backs from center. And the other backs couldn't get together with the quarterbacks for anything near good timing. So that first-day scrimmage went slow. But Mitchell and Bill Pace, who later went into the Army and was lost as a backfield coach for the season, got many factors such as ball handling on a smoother basis. George Bernhardt and Dixie White taught the linemen new assignments, and ways to block and new footing. Nevertheless, the main emphasis of this formulative period was devoted to defense. Mitchell figured his best bet was to build a good defense to "keep from getting humiliated in the fall."

The traditional Red-White intrasquad game at the end of the spring period gave promise of things to come. The blocking was sharp, the ball handling much improved, timing good and all-around the offense better than expected and the defense on a par. And fans had other things to marvel at. There was the pigeon-toed variation of the split T. Under this system the halfbacks were turned in toward the center. This gave a quicker start to any play toward the outside. The quick kick was a real crowd pleaser. It turned out to be so deadly, in fact, that Gerald Nesbitt, the man behind Henry Moore, was tops in the Southwest Conference in punting with a 46.9-yard average on 13 quickies. His greatest boot was a 76-yarder from the Arkansas four-yard mark against Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl. This Mitchell gem was accomplished by a snapback through the quarterback's legs to the fullback who turned to the right sideline and kicked the ball end-over-end off the side of his foot.

It was a season of recognition for the Porkers. Two of their games were featured on a regional National Broadcasting Company television hookup. Both turned out to be wins. The first, against Rice at Houston was a defensive battle the first half and very much the same the second half when Walker kicked a field goal from three yards out for a 3-0 halftime margin. Then another seven points later iced the Arkansas victory and spoiled all hopes for Rice on its homecoming and "Jess Neely Day." The next week against SMU saw the Hogs impress with a choking defense and better offense than the score indicated for a 6-0 victory. These games were just part of the success story.

Football Back on the hill September 1 the Porkers got down to the real work. Everything looked good that first day. And things looked better as the first game with Tulsa approached. There was a problem with Halfback Preston Carpenter hobbling on a bad knee, Center Jerry Ford and Quarterback Buddy Benson with similar injuries. Lockhart, injured in baseball, was gone for the season. The same eventually happened to Ford. Despite these losses the opener was successful: Not only did Arkansas win but the game furnished a valuable morale building foundation. The Razorbacks approached the contest full of anxiety. This game was to be the test of the switch from the single wing and 21-6 was a passing grade. Mitchell's report card: "We're tickled to death to get the first game over. Now I believe we can settle down and have a pretty good football team. We needed that one awfully bad." A home crowd of 18,000 watched Moore get things rolling with a 64-yard burst through the middle for a touchdown. Thomason hit over later from the one and Walker passed to Halfback Ronnie Underwood to put things on ice. Two of those TDs were set up on fumble recoveries.

Under the lights of War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock the next week the Hogs overturned the ragged Oklahoma A & M Aggies, 21-0, before 30,000 hopefuls. Arkansas again relied greatly on recovery of fumbles for the shutout and showed marked improvement in every phase. Thomason passed to End Ted Souter for the first blood, punched over from the one for the second TD and Moore shot over short for the other score.

Then came the first Conference test and TCU, the eventual league champ, had things about its own way with a 26-0 nod at Fayetteville. Tackle Norman Hamilton intercepted a pass in the first quarter and returned it for 39 yards and a touchdown and TCU was on its way.

Such bad things continued to happen to the Porkers for three more quarters — against Baylor in a night game at Waco. With 11:32 remaining in the final quarter the Bears had a 25-6 lead. Arkansas roared downfield for the two quick touchdowns and the clock died with the Hogs within inches of a score. There was a significant factor in that contest. First unit Center Harold Steelman suffered an injury and soph Jay Donathan, who two weeks before was considered a red-shirt player, came in early and made a great debut for his college career. That led to his first squad position the rest of the schedule. During the ensuing week Benson was moved to halfback, leaving the quarterbacking job to other hands.

The Porkers played in Little Rock that week end and came into possession of a sweet victory over Texas. The ground game clicked in that one for 319 yards and Moore gathered 115 yards to become the top ground gainer in UA's history with 1,500 yards. There was the grudge battle with Mississippi at Oxford and the Porkers had their greatest letdown in the first quarter to allow the Rebels two quick touchdowns. The Hogs recovered in the second 15-minute period but it was too late. The following Monday the squad lost a tackle, Billy Ray Smith, who was dismissed on charges of breaking curfew rules.

It was a fine homecoming the next week and was made even greater by the 7-7 tie with Texas A & M, a big favorite with its whiz-kids. Thomason, the lad who was plucked off the intramural lot in his freshman season, suffered a fractured arm in the first quarter of that battle. He continued playing the rest of the game, though, and the seriousness of the hurt wasn't discovered until the week end had passed. Thus a starting halfback was lost for the season.

Arkansas got that Rice victory, minus Thomason, and there were rumbles and rumors of Gator, Sugar and Cotton Bowl bids. Actually there was good foundation for the Gator, which publicly listed the Porks as prospects. Arkansas became a more likely candidate with that decision over SMU.

So bowl scouts sat in the stands at Little Rock while the post-conference season letdown came, the Hogs bowing to LSU, 7-13, and dreams took a quick flight out the window. The Porks were ready for that one seemingly, looking sharp in daily drills. There was enthusiasm to win this one for Barney on "John Barnhill Day" and that failed too.

Just when did the Razorbacks "arrive"? Let Mitchell tell it: "We figured before the season we would come into our own by the Texas game — and we did." The Arkansas Traveler said after that game: "The pass defense was complete, the blocking sharp and major mistakes non-existent." Mitchell offered: "Our biggest improvement was in pass defense. We've improved so much over the past three weeks it's hard to believe." One thing was clear, everything clicked in the split T as it should be performed. Statistically many things were revealed. There was a fourth-place finish for a team picked to finish sixth or seventh. Arkansas had the second leading ground gainer in the league with Moore, who carried 134 times for a net 701 yards. This was particularly outstanding for a fullback on a split T team, who usually is more valuable as a blocker than as a runner. But Moore was sent to the outside many times and with his speed could make that sort of play work. His backstop, Nesbitt, gained 371 yards and between them they dominated the Arkansas offense. Moore was fifth in total offense. Christian led the circuit in interceptions, snatching four for 83 yards in returns and Nesbitt led the punters. Don Horton, a soph flash, topped the SWC in punt returns with seven for a 24.7-yard average. Walker was the third leading scorer with 41 points, helped along with 14 conversions and one field goal. Linemen such as Bill Fuller, Bobby Gilliam, Wayland Roberts, George Bequette, and Stuart Perry among many others didn't get into the figures but were very instrumental in the success.

When the final results were in everyone was satisfied. The switch in formations, the big stumbling block, had been licked handsomely. The defense had been adequate to do what Mitchell had started it out for in the spring. The passing attack was a bit disappointing but could have been satisfying if a real need had arisen. It was another good season in Arkansas' chain of late-won successes.

Football

When the season reached the latter stages it was apparent that not everything had worked out as Mitchell had hoped. The coach had long been aware of the slowness of the team as a whole, ever since that first day of spring drills. This speed worked out better than had been thought, but at the same time other Southwest Conference teams developed more swiftness than expected. Thus, by comparison, Arkansas team speed was disappointing. Another letdown came with the passing attack. The blame for the aerial failure couldn't be placed on any individuals. Sometimes the passers were off, and sometimes passes were thrown at the wrong time — against defenses that were ready or good. Sometimes the protection for the passer wasn't all that it could have been and sometimes the patterns were paced wrong or didn't have the speed to get loose. All these things chimed in sometimes, and the overhead game worked.

Usually a split T team doesn't rely too much on the passing game, preferring, rather, to stick to the turf and grind out yardage and beat down the defense on punishing drives. It was a little different at Arkansas. Mitchell had figured that two things — a good passing game and a stout defense — would carry the load until everything began clicking. Apparently the defensive play was pleasing.

There were other surprises, too. But they came from the other side of the field. Mitchell felt that films from 1954 games would help him get a line on TCU, Baylor and Texas. But that information had to go out the window in all three cases. TCU didn't use flankers or spread out its offensive alignment as much as the previous season. Baylor threw the ball severalfold over what had been previously expected — 27 times. Texas, which Mitchell earlier figured would be a straight team with little throwing, unwound with 28 tosses.

Jack sort of went out on the limb while the season was still going on. "We figured if we won six games we would have a real season," he said. "If we won five we would have done fine. But if we won only four we would have figured we didn't do such a good job."

Basketball: An outside chance

Probably no other Arkansas basketball team has been as surprising as the one operated by Glen Rose in the 1955-56 season. For Rose almost surprised even himself when the Razorbacks came out of a dull December into the stretch of the Southwest Conference season to finish second. The Porkers started practice in November with little promise in the way of material and Rose recognized what was ahead. "I don't know when an Arkansas squad has faced a tougher assignment — especially considering our lack of height and over-all size," he said. "The tallest man with any experience on our squad is only 6-4 — and that's about it. Last year only two or three teams in the conference had a real height advantage over us — this season everyone has a big man but Arkansas."

So with that prospect the six lettermen, two squadmen and four sophomores went to work. There was a complete rebuilding job to be done — with emphasis to be placed on the defense, as it later turned out. The Hogs opened their new fieldhouse December 1 and the only result was a 65-64 defeat by Southeastern Oklahoma, and little to impress the 4,000 turnout. Rose had settled by that time on the lineup he was to use throughout the 24 games: Manuel Whitley, a 6-4 senior with quick hands who had spent the last two seasons with an Army team in Germany; Terry Day, an all-arms-and-legs junior from Magnolia who was best on defense; Pete Butler, a 6-4 center who could jump center and get rebounds with the best of them; Buddy Smith, a wise veteran who could stabilize the action and get all over the boards; and Jerald Barnett, a fine guard from Harrison who teamed with Smith as co-captain. Along with this bunch, soph Freddy Grim of Green Forest worked as the sixth man and this was the nucleus of the club. Joe Dickson, Wayne Dunn and Joe Kretschmar also clocked plenty of time.

These hands went through the most miserable cage opening in the school's history — dropping seven straight before scratching up a victory. But it was time well spent and the Southwest Conference holiday tournament at Houston proved that much. Rose and the Porkers had a surprise for the rest of the league that time — a zone defense to combat the big man. Southern Methodist came from behind in the closing minutes to nudge out a victory in the zone's first test and Baylor had an equally tough time the next day. But it started clicking along with the shots of Whitley and the rest of them when the Texas A & M game came around and the Razorbacks walked off with an 80-49 decision. Whitley was named to the all-tournament team for his three great performances. There were still justified skeptics through the 51-50 loss to Missouri.

70-67, for the most successful league road trip in years. They knocked off three other league foes and also Mississippi before they were again to be defeated. That time it was an encounter with SMU with the SWC leadership at stake and the Mustangs took the close one, 58-53, with the Hogs counting their worst shooting percentage since their win streak had started. Baylor came to town and tried to freeze its way to a win but Arkansas held on for a 36-31 victory. Three games later it was pretty clear: SMU was headed for the title but Arkansas had an outside chance to take it. So with that incentive Rose's men went before the network television cameras at Dallas, played SMU off its feet the first half before falling to a second-half rally and a 72-80 defeat. But then Arkansas found TCU easy, 90-71, and put away second place. And two months earlier every one had delegated it to sixth or seventh without batting an eye.

So the Porkers accomplished much more than they really should have by digging in with hard work and the spirit of winning. It was a sweet second place. Many attributed Rose with the best job of his coaching career, and those included men who had played under him and for him since the mid 20's. They told him so at a testimonial dinner after the second Texas game.

BLOCKING a shot by Jerald Barnett, a Rice Owl holds down the score. Rice Institute trounced the Razorbacks 85-65 in second encounter. Rice finished third in the conference.

There were many other factors to be taken into consideration. The most important, perhaps, were the other six on the ball club — Dickson, Dunn, Kretschmar, Charlie Brown, Edgar Dozier and Don Trumbo, the latter joining the Porkers at mid-year after a successful cage career on the west coast with a service team. These men represented the needed depth that kept the Razorbacks rolling through the 24 games. Rebounding ability was a surprising and contributing factor. The chief contributors to this phase

Basketball were Whitley, Butler, Day and Smith. Although they gave away height to most opponents, the Hogs came out with 1147 rebounds to 1012 for opposition. Their fluid zone gave them the best defense in the conference, 64.6 points allowed per game. Whitley's sure hands made him top scorer with 409 points, the second highest total ever by an Arkansas player. Hampered in several games by a chronic back ailment, Manuel averaged 17 points per contest and his 30 points in one game was the highest single total by any of the Razorbacks. Barnett put in 289 points for a 12-point average. Day tallied 220 markers and Butler followed with 211, making four starters who matched or exceeded the 200-point-per-season mark. The Razorbacks over the long haul averaged 67.3 points per outing. Topping off all the honors Whitley and Barnett were named to all-Southwest Conference teams. So it was quite a nice season.

Baseball

The 1955 Razorback baseball team put on a spirited stretch drive to sweep the last four games on the schedule and finish the season with 11 wins and 11 losses. It was the first .500 or better season for the Arkansas diamond squad in four years. Competing on a non-conference level, Coach Bill Ferrell's Hogs struggled through the 22 game slate with only three front-line pitchers and a couple of relievers. Righthanded Tommy Cusack, a senior letterman, posted the most wins among the hurlers. He notched six wins and lost five decisions. Charlie Bogan, a tobacco chewing junior, hurled an even season — five wins and five losses. The junior lefty posted the Porker's best earned run average, however, with a 3.33 mark as compared to Cusack's 3.79. Unheralded sophomore Jan Rayder, although a part-time starter, was credited with no wins or losses. He had a 4.70 ERA.

The Razorback batting title went to Joe Thomason who rapped the ball steadily for a .359 average. Pitcher Bogan, who doubled duties as a part-time first baseman, followed Thomason with .340. Then came Joe Kretschmar at .310, and Preston Carpenter with a .301 average. All were juniors during the '55 campaign. Shortstop Kretschmar knocked three home runs and Carpenter, the regular catcher, puncher one over the fence. Walt Matthews and Rogers Overby were also credited with one home run apiece. With the exception of seniors Cusack and Bobbie Westphal, and Bogan who was declared ineligible, the team returned intact for the 1956 competition.

Important wins were the 2-1 victory over Missouri, National Collegiate baseball champion of two years ago, and a two-game sweep of the series with Kansas University.

All Razorback home games are played on the University-maintained Washington County baseball diamond. The fairgrounds field is operated in conjunction with the county and the University maintains complete supervision over the physical facilities during its own season. Now developed into an excellent enclosed field with good drainage, the ball park has a seating capacity of 2,500.

SWINGING at a Missouri pitch, Joe Kretschmar, Razorback short stop, paces Arkansas to an important 2-1 win over Mizzou team.

Track

NEW COACH for the Razorback team, Ab Bidwell, with distance star Ed Morton. Bidwell came from University of Wichita.

Coach Tracy Scott's 1955 track team emerged fourth in the six-college field of the Sixth Annual Arkansas Relays at Fayetteville. They also fared badly in the Texas and Kansas Relays, but trounced Tulsa University and Sheppard Air Base in a triangular meet in which soph Terry Robinson took two firsts in the hurdles. Only seven varsity men went to place Arkansas sixth in the Southwest Conference meet in May. There, sophomore footballer Gerald Henderson broke the school shot record with a put of 47 feet $\frac{1}{4}$ inch, and senior Al Eshbaugh won the two-mile run at 9:32.4. Ed Morton, a Canadian sophomore, was second in the mile at 4:20.5, and senior Jim Tennison ran fourth. Tal Hooker, another senior, was third in the two-mile.

Rebuilding began last fall after the arrival of veteran Wichita track coach Ab Bidwell and his assistant, former UA distance star James Frank Brown. Autumn cross-country conditioned several newcomers who ran with remaining lettermen Ed Morton and Bill Ross. The harriers ran first in only one of five meets. They were third at the Conference meet, but Morton took individual first place. Later he ran fourteenth of 85 in the NCAA cross-country meet at East Lansing, Michigan. Soph Earl Bond was second man in cross-country.

Using the indoor track in the new fieldhouse for the first time, a few men trained through the winter, and in February they were joined by about 40 varsity and freshman aspirants. Arkansas sent a token team to its first indoor meet, a conditioner at Oklahoma University in February. Pre-season trial running endangered a good many school records, including the varsity half-mile, mile, four-mile relay, distance medley, shot and discus, and the freshman 440, 880, mile, sprint medley, mile relay, high jump, shot and discus.

The Southwest Conference meet at Fayetteville in May topped an ambitious ten-event 1956 schedule, which included five chances for freshmen to take part. The Porks entered relay meets at Oklahoma A & M, Texas. Kansas and Drake, but the varsity by-passed the Arkansas Relays to run that day in the Oklahoma University Quadrangular meet. Another four-school event at Oklahoma A & M, triangular meets at Pittsburg (Kans.) State Teachers and Fayetteville, and the Southwest Recreational meet at Fort Worth rounded out the schedule.

DISTANCE men on the Arkansas team are Canadians Ed Morton, right, and half-miler Bill Ross, both from Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Golf

Arkansas' varsity golfers in 1955 finished with a brilliant 8-2 record and were undefeated in six matches at home. Competing in Southwest conference play, the Porkers were in third place with 18 points won and 18 points lost. In reality, they defeated four of their six league opponents.

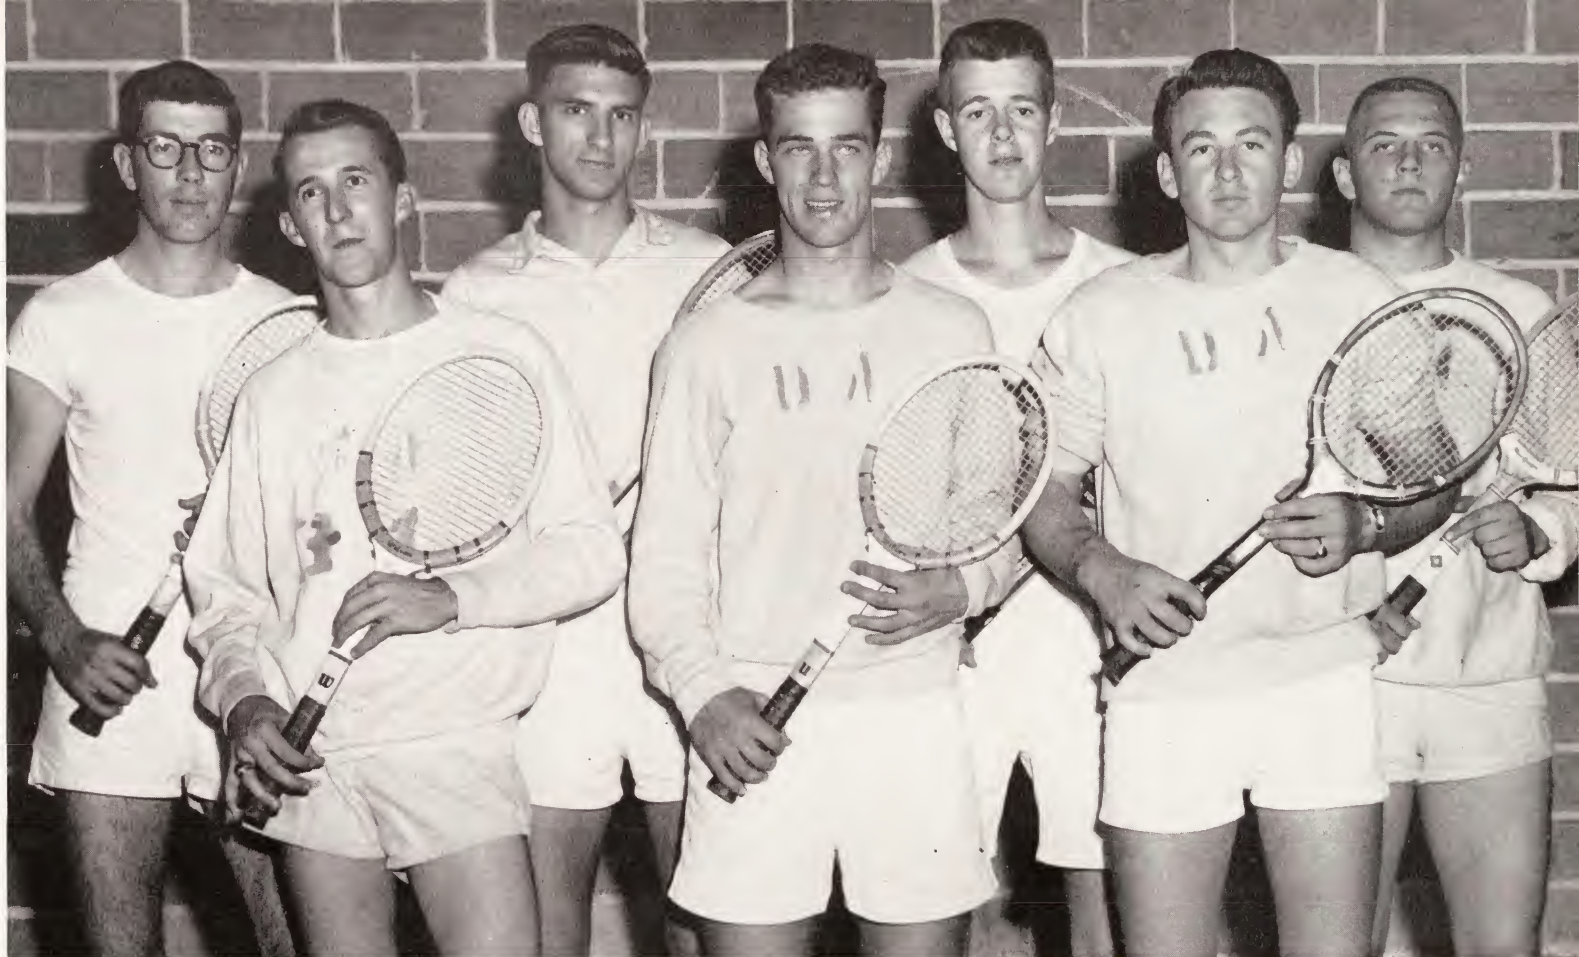

Competing as Razorback linksmen were Phil Rogers, Gray Linzel, Tinker Gordon, Dickie Newcombe, Bass Trumbo and Ellis Poisell. Bob Zander, professional at the Fayetteville Country Club course where the Hogs play their home matches, tutored the Porker linksters for the second straight year. Zander, a native of Michigan and Indiana, took over the local proposition after a similar post in Liberal, Kan., in 1948. He was an outstanding amateur golfer in Indiana before turning professional.

In Southwest Conference play, the Porkers opened with a 4-2 win over strong Texas Christian University on the Fayetteville course. Taking to the road, the Arkansas golfers dropped a 1-5 decision to Texas University—who eventually won the conference golf crown. Back at home, the Hogs trounced the Baylor linksmen four games to two for their second win of the season conference-wise. A journey to Dallas and Southern Methodist University proved quite disastrous to Zander's squad. They fell before the sharp Mustang golfers 0-6. The Razorbacks returned to the home links for their final two conference battles and won both. They topped the Rice Institute 5-1 and Texas A & M 4-2 to stay undefeated on the Fayetteville course.

Non-conference play was more to the liking of the boys as they rushed past four opponents for important wins. The Hogs dropped the Missouri Tigers twice in home-and-home play. In Columbia, Arkansas mastered the Mizzou linksmen by 5½ to ½ and on the local course they blanked the Tigers by a 7-0 count. The University of Nebraska visited the Fayetteville links and absorbed an 18½ to 2½ beating from the Hogs. Tulsa lost to the potent Porkers by 5 to 1.

The Fayetteville Country Club course is a beautiful 6,000-yard 18-hole affair. Located seven miles southeast of the campus on a rolling hill-top, the Fayetteville links are well-kept and draw considerable praise from visiting golfers. Par is 72 for the course with the record of 62 held by Byron Nelson.

Tennis

The 1955 Arkansas varsity tennis squad finished with a 6-5 record — all in non-conference play and including important wins over Tulsa and Missouri. Tennis Coach John “Red” Davis, starting his third year as tennis mentor in 1955, worked with a contingent of Ewell Lee and Dick Reid, seniors, and juniors Geep Kuechenmeister, Bill Geren and Glenn Lane. It was the fourth straight year for the varsity netmen to post a .500 or better season.

Coach “Red” Davis has molded a winning tennis squad in each of his three years with the Razorbacks. Employed originally as an administrative aide, Davis is program and concession manager for Arkansas. He has been instrumental in twice directing the Tri-State Invitational Tennis meet here in June. While in Florida, Davis was renowned as Sports writer and is credited with originating the All-Southern high school football stars.

Tennis, maintained as a minor sport at the University, has been surprisingly good. A strenuous non-conference schedule is carried on each year. Arkansas is unable to compete in Southwest conference tennis play due to inclement weather conditions during the early spring months.

Geep Kuechenmeister, Hot Springs junior, was tabbed as the outstanding varsity tennis player in '55. He returns to bolster the '56 netmen in a tough 12-game slate.

For Freshmen: A year in the field

Beginning their second year in Southwest Conference grid competition, the freshman football squad played a five-game season under the direction of Coach Tracy Scott. The Shoats fought to a scoreless deadlock in their first game — an encounter with the Southern Methodist frosh on a rain-soaked gridiron at Texarkana on October 6. The Shoats posted their first and only victory of the season in a night game at Ft. Smith with the Texas Christian Wogs. Winning by a 26-20 score, the baby Porkers were paced on long runs by halfbacks Dale Boutwell and Donnie Stone. Boutwell raced for two touchdowns, scoring first on a 90 yard kickoff return and then again with an 84 yard job on a pitchout from quarterback James Monroe. Stone set up the first touchdown with a 70 yard scamper to the 19 yard line. The Campbell boys (no relation), Charles N. and Charles D., both scored on line plunges from a few yards out.

STOPPED on an end run, freshman back Jim Wetherington is spilled during a night game at Fort Smith with the Texas Christian University frosh team.

The Shoat losses came in a clash with the Oklahoma A & M freshmen here in an afternoon game and against the Tulsa frosh at Skelly stadium in the Oil City. The Aggie freshmen edged the Shoats 7-0 and the Golden Gale slipped past the Arkansas frosh 14-13. The final game of the season, a contest with Little Rock Junior College on November 18, was cancelled due to inclement weather and soggy conditions of the Memorial stadium turf.

Though compiling a not-too-impressive record, the freshman gridders showed marked improvement during the latter part of the season. They caught on quickly and played with progressing confidence in Coach Jack Mitchell's split T.

Coach Jack Hess' freshman basketball squad relied on height and hoop-proficiency to chalk up the best frosh record in ten years. Dropping their first two games, the Shoats won the ten remaining games on the schedule. Big Jim Carpenter led the baby Porks against such teams as Joplin Junior College, Oklahoma A & M freshman, Tulsa freshman, and Connors Oklahoma Junior College. Carpenter topped the frosh point-makers and was leading rebounder.

Cheerleaders

During a football game a cheerleader expends an enormous amount of energy. Leading yells beneath stands full of happy faces, hostile glares and an occasional inebriated roar, the cheerleaders work to maintain enthusiasm and build spirit.

The long rides in crowded cars to out of state ball games, an endless number of cold hot dogs and hot cokes during the games to preserve a sufficient amount of energy and moisten dry throats, sometimes fighting with the Student Senate to secure inadequate funds for expenses are all part of the cheerleaders job. The job, for the most part, is thankless. But every year there is another crop of aspirants during the elections: jumping, cheering, full of energy and hope, working for an opportunity to expend more energy for a full year.

INSTRUCTION in the fundamentals of golf is one of the outstanding functions of Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation.

Sports on the sidelines

RESTING during a time-out in an intramural basketball game, players talk with spectators and among themselves, make plans for rest of the game.

The Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation has a threefold purpose: First, to train leaders and teachers in the field of physical education; second, to conduct a program of physical education for freshman and sophomore women; and third, to provide an intramural program for both men and women.

The department is under Dr. Troy Hendricks, and the women's activities are directed by Dr. Wincie Carruth. While the intramural program is the most encompassing single activity, the department has provided extensive work in modern dance and primary instruction for women students in various sports.

BASKETBALL generates a great deal of interest in intramural program, and, aside from football, is most popular.

WOMEN Compete in a wide variety of intramural sports, including basketball, softball, bowling and volleyball.

SOFTBALL in the spring is a popular intramural sport. At left, Jack Evans, Phi Delt, pops up in a game with Kappa Sigma. Bob Raff is catching and Jim Arnett is acting as the plate umpire.

MODERN DANCE is part of the extensive training offered by the department to give students practice in expression, coordination.

An Effective Program

The effective program of intramural activities is a constructive force on the University campus. The program is designed to enable students to compete with groups or individuals in an organized sports program without being highly skilled or unusually proficient in any given sport. The intramural program has far-reaching effects, and the sweepstakes trophy awarded annually to the organized house with the most number of points is one of the most coveted prizes of the year. The intramural program develops leadership and fosters a spirit of competition and sportsmanship.

MILITARY

Army ROTC

The Army ROTC detachment was established in 1873 and is now in its 83rd year as one of the oldest departments in the University, as well as one of the first Reserve Officer Training Corps units in the United States. The ROTC program is divided into basic and advanced work. To be selected for work in the advanced phase, a student must score an acceptable grade on the RQ-3 examination, have a junior standing with two years remaining in college work, and either have completed the basic courses or at least two years of active military service.

Included in the advanced training is a six weeks period spent by advanced students at Ft. Hood, Texas, during the summer preceding their senior year. Within this six weeks period the cadets are schooled in the actual operation of an Army post plus field experience in the use of weapons under simulated battle conditions.

The ROTC unit comprises a standard military organization, and sponsors a drill platoon and one of the outstanding rifle teams in the southwest. Through classwork, practical experience and a fostering of individual thought, the ROTC training program seeks to develop young men who will continue the time-honored traditions of military leadership.

Simpson and University president John Tyler Caldwell, was interviewed by cadet public information officer Steve B. Friedheim for Friedheim's Campus Circuit program and appraised the work of the training unit.

Air Force ROTC

The Air Force ROTC detachment at the University of Arkansas has concerned itself for the past two years with the development of future Air Force officers through a generalized program of education. The corps is composed of men in basic and advanced work. The men are selected for the advanced portion through both the successful completion of the Air Force Officers Qualification test and an all inclusive physical examination.

Along with their study at the University, the cadets must attend a four week summer session at an Air Base before receiving their commissions.

The unit comprises a wing which is sub-divided into groups, squadrons and flights. The main unit sponsors such supplementary divisions as a band, drill team and rifle team. The cadet staff plans and executes the actual operation of the wing with the approval of the PAS and his staff. The objective of the program is to effect, through a self-actualizing process, an attitude of service and knowledge of officer responsibility which will serve to augment the cadet's prowess throughout their tour of duty and in civilian capacities.

Leper in the stop bath

To some people the 1956 Razorback is something more than a yearbook. To the staff members who walked over to the office in sub-freezing weather from practice teaching in the Education building to work until date call on stacks of cards and pictures, and those who worked until dawn with stubborn layouts for a section that was already late to the printer, this book is something of a jealous monster that devoured time, strangled grade-points and screamed so loud that sleep was impossible. Editors worked their various staffs to the limit of en-duration and worried about how their section would compare to the rest in the book. During the last few days some lied that the only thing they were interested in was finishing, but over coffee they mused about the things that the photographers were doing in the darkroom and offered advice to the feature editor for the extra pages that were added to his section.

At the first of the year they had agreed that the new approach to layout decided upon the preceeding year would be effective and appealing. As the year progressed, however, they began to wonder just how effective the layout and organization would be, and their misgivings were replaced by an uncertainty that was erased only with trips to the darkroom to poke around with the pictures in the stop bath and sessions over the layout table with pasted-up dummies.

The staff grew smaller as the work grew harder, but several continued to climb the stairs every afternoon and remain until their eyes became red with strain and their tempers short with fatigue, and they worked with a conviction that they were recording the activities of a year that was both singular and significant.

There was concern in the office when the staff discovered that the University enrollment had grown faster than the yearbook's budget, and the business manager requested additional funds from the administration. The request flowed with official languidness through the proper channels and was officially lost somewhere en route to final approval, so the business manager filed the request again and prepared to wait for a reply, while the editorial staff added necessary pages to the class section and continued to publish a book that might be paid for out of deficit funds.

The editors cut classes occasionally to walk to the Fine Arts Center and listen to recently cut tapes that were to be used for the record in the back of the book. The trips to the FAC, with the curiosity of the set construction, painting and rehearsals on the stage beneath the sound booth, were a fascinating relief from the offices full of typewriters and cluttered with pictures and empty copy hooks.

Walking over to Hill Hall after class and staying late to order supper from Jug's and even later to explain to a sleepy nightwatchman why the lights in the building were still burning at three a.m. became a habit; most members of the staff agreed that it was a bad habit. But the opportunity to create a book that has the possibility of being either a leper or a contribution to something or other promised to offset the bad habits that were acquired in the process. Besides that, an editor remarked at breakfast one morning at four, bad habits can be broken.

REVIEW IN SOUND was produced and narrated by Steve Friedheim. Utilizing facilities in Fine Arts Center and with advice from Norman DeMarco, Friedheim recorded and edited tape for the record.

ADMINISTRATIVE work on the yearbook was managed by Jack Williams. His work with staff editors and trips to Camden for conferences with the printer were responsible for the smooth running organization and cooperation.

CLASS EDITOR Patt White, a Tri-Delt from Bentonville, maintained a large staff to file and alphabetize class cards and pictures, type and edit the long lists of names, living groups and home towns to send to the printer.

In Fayetteville, like every other city or town, there are a few rare people that read every word in a newspaper. They read with an avid interest the item announcing that the Ozark Hikers will meet at dawn Saturday morning behind Old Main; they turn with the same insatiable curiosity to the intramural story about the girls' basketball game and the coed who missed the free throw and lost the game for her house; and they pick up every word in the story about the fraternity that initiated sixteen men Sunday and the model pledge who is from Newport. The not-so-rare people are those that scan the paper looking for headlines of personal or general interest. The girl that missed the free throw will read the intramural story, and the model pledge will probably clip the story about the initiation and send it back home to Newport.

On the second floor of Hill Hall at the top of three flights of stairs is Arkansas Traveler office. Four days a week the members of the Traveler staff trudge up the stairs and perform those duties that are necessary to publish the newspaper for the next morning. At four o'clock some of the staff members walk down the stairs and go home. The editors walk down the stairs to the print shop in the basement and look over the compositor's stone, watching lead hot from the Linotype fill up the forms, rearranging ads to give a story more space or blocking out a space for a story or a picture that will be engraved later that night. At five o'clock the editor and two of his staff editors, sometimes a reporter and maybe a photographer, leave Hill Hall and cross the campus to the Union for a cup of coffee and a critical discussion of the day's work. There will be more work that night: Tying up the next day's paper, planning the editions for the next week, outlining stories and pictures assignments for the next month.

To give the campus a complete coverage the Traveler works with the University public relations office and the Office of Student Affairs; Traveler staff members work with the student that brings up a story scrawled in pencil on scrap paper about the weekly meeting of the history fraternity; they talk with the dorm president over the telephone about the MIHC and perhaps an editor will dispatch a photographer to get a picture of of the dorm presidents leaving for a convention in Colorado for the next morning's paper; reporters bring in stories to the campus desk where the stories are edited and sent down to print shop or recorded in the future book and pulled for later publication.

On Saturday and Sunday the editorial page for Tuesday's paper is written, and there the Traveler expresses its opinion, offers criticism and suggestion and occasionally reminds its readers that the paper is free from censorship by an administration that is sometimes the target of the paper's criticism.

On its editorial page the Traveler touches home base first, and on other pages and for the remainder of the week it makes the rest; the girls' intramural game, the fraternity initiation, the Ozark Hikers and the countless other activities of a university community. To publish a newspaper that interests a coed from a dormitory on the far side of the campus and also interests a student on Stadium drive is rather important — most newspapermen will say that it is imperative.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR Phyllis Dillaha. A Kappa Kappa Gamma from Little Rock assisted in makeup on the Traveler as well as writing news stories and editing copy for the flat-bed daily.

MANAGING EDITOR Vance Arbuckle organized the material for each issue of the Traveler and covered many of the special assignments, planned headlines and worked on the editorial page.

CAMPUS EDITOR Frances Wilson, a Zeta Tau Alpha from El Dorado, also worked as a part-time secretary for the Journalism Department. Frances gathered and organized the material for the Daily Bulletin in the Traveler, did general staff writing.

SPORTS in the Traveler, both varsity and intramural, was handled from football through track season by Sammy Smith, a Pi Kappa Alpha from Camden. His trips to the majority of the out-of-town games maintained the Traveler's complete and up-to-date coverage of the Razorbacks.

WIRE NEWS appearing in the Traveler was prepared for publication by Kay Terry, a Pi Beta Phi from St. Charles. Each afternoon Kay checked news stories coming over the United Press wire, and arranged and edited the copy for the world news.

SPECIAL assignments were the main concern of Martha Whitehead Long. Martha covered the Student Senate meetings and the Religious Emphasis Week convocations in shorthand, then typed news stories from her notes.

The Arkansas Engineer is the student publication of the College of Engineering. Now in its thirty-fifth year, the magazine is considered one of the finest of its type in the country.

The Engineer is a member of the Engineering College Magazines Associated. Seven of this year's staff attended the annual ECMA convention last fall. At that time Arkansas successfully bid for the 1956 convention.

This year's Engineer staff has attempted to put out a larger magazine with emphasis on modern layout and art, as well as a broad variety of articles.

It includes legal articles written by members of the Law school faculty and outstanding legal writers. One of the features of this year's fall issue was a commentary on 31 of the acts enacted by the Arkansas Legislature in its 1955 session.

The high requirements for editorial positions on the Review include grade point and amount of previously published material.

Board of Publications

Once a year appointees, permanent members and alternating members draw their chairs up to a table and sit as a board that functions like the by product of an antiquated student constitution that it is. In addition to the chairman of the Journalism Department, a representative from the University Business Office, the editor of the Razorback and the editor of the Arkansas Traveler, who are permanent members of the board, the 1956 Board of Publications consisted of the editor of the Guild Ticker, annual magazine for the College of Business Administration, editor of the Arkansas Agriculturist, College of Agriculture quarterly, a business major from the student senate and an economics professor appointed by the president of the University. The editor of the Traveler sits as chairman of the board.

This year the board voted approval for the Traveler to install the United Press wire service and a Fairchild Scan-A-Graver. In the February meeting the board elected Ken Danforth, El Dorado, editor of the Traveler, and Tom Williamson, Fort Smith, business manager. David Shaw, a marketing junior from North Little Rock, will edit the 1957 Razorback and G. W. Lookadoo, an arts student from Arkadelphia, will handle ad sales. Buddy Phillips, a member of the Traveler sports staff, was elected to edit the "A" Book.

ARTS

In the FAC: A wide variety

The University's Fine Art Center offers facilities that are unsurpassed by those at any other University in the United States. The center provides basic and advanced instruction in music, drama, speech, art, architecture and related fields of interest. One of the newest buildings on the campus, the Fine Arts Center makes maximum use of modern training aids and educational devices.

One facet of the FAC that receives major public interest is the work of the University Theatre and the Opera Workshop. Offering theatre-goers a wide variety of presentations, the groups have received favorable publicity through tours and appearances throughout the state and midwest. The Fine Arts Center is managed by Norman DeMarco.

DIRECTOR Norman DeMarco applies make-up to Jim Brandon for the part of Linus Larrabee, sr., in the University Theatre's first production, Sabrina Fair.

INDIGNANT FATHER, Linus Larrabee, sr. (Jim Brandon), left, is horrified to learn that his younger son David (Steve Frieheim) plans to marry the daughter of the family's chauffeur. The popular play was well-received by University Theatre audiences at all performances.

SABRINA (Joyce Stowe) tells her father the difficulty in her returning to New York as the "chauffeur's daughter."

Sabrina Fair

Sabrina Fair opened the University Theatre season with levity and polish. Joyce Stowe portrayed the whimsical daughter of the millionaire chauffeur, and Jack Foreman was cast opposite her as the practical Linus Larrabee, jr. With strong support from Steve Friedheim as David, Jim Brandon as the eccentric elder Larrabee, and Joe Whiteaker as the chauffeur, the play moved quickly and confidently across one of Preston Magruder's sets, reflected the tireless, competent direction of Norman DeMarco, and proved to be one of the most popular productions of the year.

MRS. WATTY (Jean Mellor), right, is concerned about the actions of the beguiling Bessie Watty (Cynthia Slankard) toward young Evans, when she talks to Miss Ronberry and John Jones. The Corn is Green presented a challenge to students; director Blair Hart managed the problems of the play with credit.

The Corn is Green presented theatre-goers with a mixture of drama and comedy. The play concerns the efforts to educate a young man taken from the coal mines by a resolute spinster, who has dedicated her life to raise the social standards of the people in the mining area.

Director Blair Hart cast Portia Kernodle in the lead and Lanny Gibson as Morgan Evans, the ambitious coal miner. Kernodle and Gibson were supported by Cynthia Slankard as Bessie Watty, Jean Mellor as Mrs. Watty, Mary Bob Foreman as Miss Ronberry and Larry Randolph as John Jones.

Though the Traveler referred to the play as producing results similar to a "mid-afternoon soap opera," the actors for the most part presented Emlyn Williams' play with understanding and ability.

The Corn Is Green

DEDICATED to raising the standards of the mining community where she lives, Miss Moffat, with the help of John Jones, right, held classes in her home for the benefit of the uneducated miners and their children.

BLACKFRIARS presented Dawn of Judgment as the third play of the year. Adapted by Dr. George Kernodle of the University speech faculty from the original Greek play by Aeschylus, the modern version was received by an interested but sometimes confused University Theatre audience.

Dawn of Judgment

The University Theatre plays are not presented primarily to entertain the audiences, but to train students in the speech department and give them an opportunity to develop their talents to the fullest possible extent. Dawn of Judgment was not a popular play with theatre-goers, but it served as an important phase of the speech department's training program. Technically, the play gave the student and audience an insight to the development of modern drama.

The play, an ancient Greek trilogy, is based on the trial of Orestes, who was tortured by his conscience until he killed his mother, who had murdered his father. The play concerns the gods helping man establish trial by jury.

Jack Foreman played the lead, with other members of the cast including Peggy Gorsage as the mother, Joe Whiteaker as the father, Joan Abbot as the sister, Charles Hathcock as the mother's lover and Mary Bob Foreman as the prophet.

Don't We All

ENDING on a note of happiness in best tradition of American-comedy, Neva Cram and Hugh Kincaid kiss and make up in year's first Opera Workshop production.

ATTEMPTING to end the domestic feud between their neighbors and make them speak to one another, Ralph (Leon McClelland) tries to kiss Nell while Amy (Jean Jones) prepares to shave Tom with the butcher knife.

DEATH of Turridu at the hands of the forsaken husband, Alfio, shocks Mama Lucia and causes concern in the chorus, signals the finale of Mascagni's Italian tragedy.

SANTUZZA (Jane Reed) sulks while Turridu (Charles Anderson) tries to explain his actions toward Lola, wayward wife of Alfio.

Don't We All, a short American comic opera, and Cavalleria Rusticana, an Italian tragedy sung in English, were presented on the same bill for the Opera Workshop's first production of the season.

The combined efforts of the University Blackfriars, the University-Fayetteville Symphony orchestra and the Collegiate Singers were under the direction of Kenneth Ballenger, who was assisted by Blair Hart. Marx Pales conducted the University-Fayetteville Symphony orchestra.

Each opera had two casts performing on alternate nights of the six-night run. The sets were designed by Preston Magruder and the costumes were by Mary Davis.

Cavalleria Rusticana

OFFERING Alfio (David Newborn) a glass of wine, Turridu, right, taunts Lola's high-tempered husband, who finally kills the arrogant Turridu.

BROADCASTING every Thursday over KGRH, Campus Circuit was originated by Steve Friedheim, who has continued to direct program.

Campus Circuit

The Campus Circuit series of radio programs was started in October of 1954 in cooperation with the Student Union radio committee and station KGRH. The series was originated by Steve B. Friedheim, an arts and science senior from Joplin, Mo. Broadcasting a thirty minute show twice a week, Campus Circuit utilizes the facilities in the Fine Arts Center and has continued during the summer as a regular program.

Campus Circuit will switch from KGRH to a university-controlled closed-circuit station when the installation of the latter is completed. The University station, tentatively named KUA, began making trial broadcasts early in January to Gregson Hall. Don Lewis and Warren Ramey are chief engineers for the project; the University station will be directed by Norman DeMarco.

WORKING with Friedheim on the Campus Circuit show, Jim Swartz, left, has served the program in the capacity of chief engineer.

COLLEGIATE SINGERS, under the direction of Richard Brothers, is the University's outstanding choral group.

Collegiate Singers

PRACTICING for their annual state tour, the Collegiate Singers sing excerpts from Haydn's Creation, Cavalleria Rusticana, and folk songs.

The Collegiate Singers is composed of some 40 students, chosen for membership in the organization on the basis of auditions. Under the direction of Richard Brothers, the group makes an annual tour of the state, giving concerts in various high schools.

This year the Collegiate Singers participated with the University Opera Workshop in the production of the opera Cavalleria Rusticana. In late March the group appeared with the University-Fayetteville Symphony orchestra and other charol organizations in a Palm Sunday presentation of Haydn's Creation.

Orchestra: The opera and oratorio

The University-Fayetteville Symphony orchestra is sponsored by the University of Arkansas and Fayetteville patrons. Conducted by Marx Pales and composed of students and Fayetteville townspeople, the orchestra has performed several times during the year, both as an individual unit and in connection with other organizations in the music department.

In February the orchestra appeared with the Opera Workshop in the presentation of two operas. Pales conducted Burrill Phillips' score for the comic opera Don't We All, and Pietro Mascagni's tragic Cavalleria Rusticana. One of the outstanding events of the season for the orchestra was the Palm Sunday presentation of Haydn's Creation with the University choral groups in the men's gym.

CONDUCTOR of the University-Fayetteville orchestra Marx Pales discusses a passage in the Cavalleria Rusticana score with one of his oboe players.

FORMAL portrait of University-Fayetteville Symphony orchestra is taken on concert stage in the Fine Arts Center.

CONDUCTING rehearsals of Joseph Haydn's famous oratorio, The Creation, Marx Pales leads the orchestra and choruses.

MEMBERS of the orchestra's string and brass sections carefully watch score for one of the group's presentations.

September 9 heard voices raised to welcome a great year for the Chios. Nancy McDonald led the cheerleaders, was co-chairman of REW, and president of Mortar Board. The Chios boasted three other members of this organization including Mary Gail Anderson, Frances Snedecor, and Virginia Bird, who also served as president of AWS. New pledge, Pat Hall, was president of Sophomore Counselors and Mary Bellingrath was elected president of Alpha Lambda Delta. Ann Rowell was chairman of the Student Union board and Carol Lynn Lackey was vice-president of Civic Club.

Besides their duties as campus leaders, the sorority managed to have a full social calendar. Beginning with a party for the faculty and continuing with a tea honoring their new housemother, there was never a dull moment. A dinner-dance held in honor of the pledge class, a Christmas party, with a dinner especially prepared by the members, and a spring formal completed the round of activities.

ROSEMARY JOHNSON, President

Rush week for the Pi Phis provided the kick-off for another eventful year, in which participation in campus affairs and social activities was successfully combined.

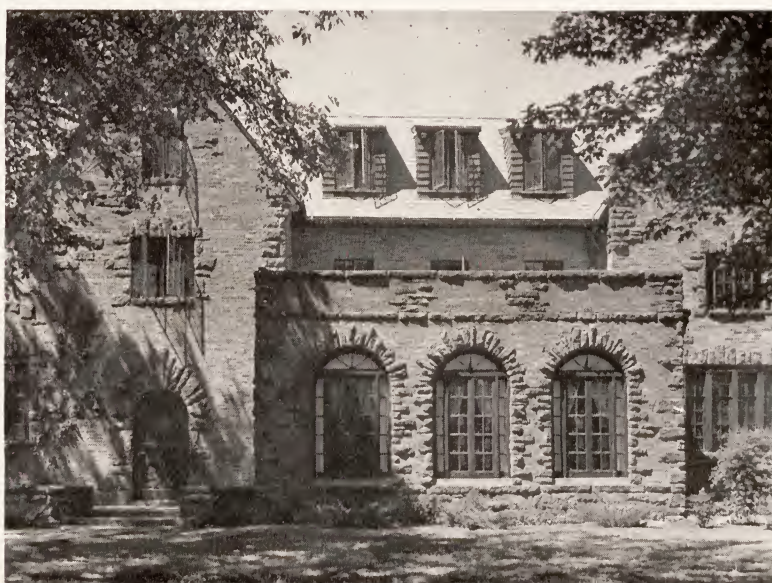

Sarah Smith was president of Panhellenic and a member of the Student Senate; Rosemary Johnson was secretary of Civic Club and Preview; and Carole Summers served as president of Sigma Alpha Iota. Elected to lead cheers for the Razorbacks was Joyce Haskew. Sue Patterson was editor of the Greek section of the Razorback, and Sandra Noll and Beth Brickell served as society editors of the Traveler, along with Kay Terry, who was wire editor of the paper.

Anne Arthurs was Honorary Lt. Colonel of the Army ROTC, and the Kappa Alpha Order selected Jane Smith as their Rose.

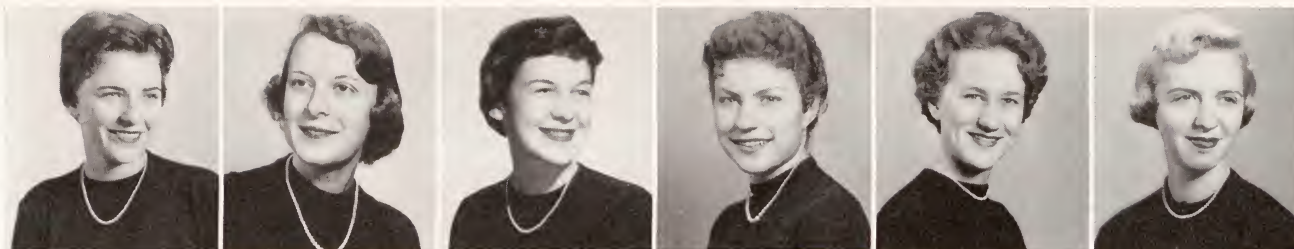

This year the Pi Phis placed second in the Homecoming float decorations with "It's A Cinch."

A whirlwind of parties and functions throughout the year added a gay note to the social calendar. Highlights of the year were a fall and spring outing, dance in honor of the new pledges, faculty tea, open houses and the annual Christmas Formal.

MARY MORRIS, president

Founded Nationally: Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, October 15, 1898.
Colors: Turquoise Blue and Steel Grey
Flower: White Violet

Looking back over the year, members of Zeta Tau Alpha could view a calendar full of good times and campus participation. Mary Lou Morris, a recently tapped member of Mortar Board, served as president and rejoiced with the initiates in a fine pledge class.

Members busy in campus activities were Frances Wilson, campus editor of the Arkansas Traveler; Mary Frances Chambers, Student Senate; and Marilyn Swears, AWS sophomore secretary.

La Ree Lloyd and Susie Henbest were maids in the Homecoming court and Barbara McNeill was Lambda Chi Alpha Crescent girl.

In activities, the Zetas won the sweepstakes in the Sigma Nu relays, third place for the Homecoming float and second in the Civic Club Singfony.

Social calendar events were not neglected with a football banquet for the team members, a dinner-dance for the new pledges, the annual Founders' Day banquet and the Mardi Gras formal.

Interfraternity Council

The IFC coordinates the efforts of each fraternity towards making a just policy and an extensive rushing program. Though each fraternity functions independently of the others, through the council they mediate any differences that might occur among the Greek letter fraternities on the campus, look for solutions to any interfraternity problem, and promote the University of Arkansas.

The bi-monthly meetings help strengthen interfraternity relations and therefore strengthen the University. Through the cooperation in the IFC the fraternities are able to enjoy fairness in competition and continued growth and fraternal spirit.

Panhellenic Council

Panhellenic Council is composed of the president and rush captain of each sorority, and it attempts to enhance the understanding of each group through statewide publicity and to establish effective rules of rush. The Panhellenic Council is an advisory-governing board established on every campus where there are two or more national sororities. The local council is an active organization which serves as a channel through which the administration may work with the sororities. The group stresses good scholarship and awards a cup to the pledge class each year which makes the highest grade point. This year's president is Sarah Smith, Pi Beta Phi.

Pledge Council

The Interfraternity Pledge Council is composed of two representatives from each fraternity and each sorority on the campus. Its relationship to pledges is similar to that of the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council to the various fraternities and sororities.

At the annual pledge dance this year, Miss Jean Pitts, Kappa Pledge, was chosen Pledge Queen of 1955 by popular vote of the fraternity pledges in a contest sponsored by the Pledge Council. The President of the Pledge Council is Al Rost.

WINSTON MAY, President

Founded Nationally: Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, October 10, 1904.
Colors: Green and Gold
Flower: Pink Rose

AGR activities for the fall are highlighted by the annual Rooster Day Dance. The spring social calendar is topped off with the Pink Rose Formal. Other than these two dances, members of AGR enjoy numerous house parties and outings.

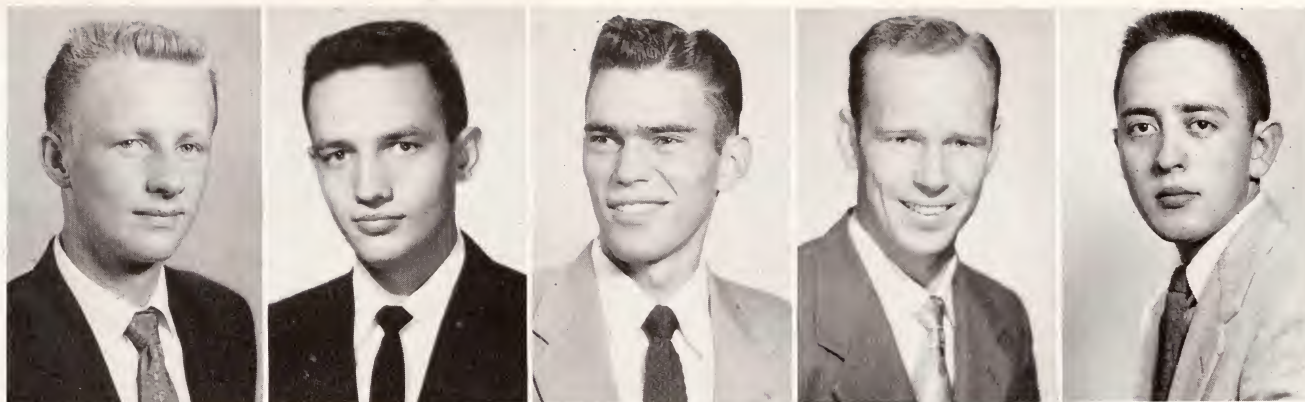

Organized in the early thirties here on the campus, Alpha Gamma Rho became the thirty-third chapter of the fraternity. AGR has many men in key organizations: Alpha Zeta, Blue Key, ODK, Business Manager of the Agriculturist, and numerous clubs and committees, indicative of its influence in the Agricultural College. Many AGR alumni are prominent in agricultural related fields also. These leaders in agriculture are examples of the purpose of Alpha Gamma Rho, "To make better men and through them a broader and better agriculture."

December 21, 1865.

Colors: Crimson and Gold

Flowers: Magnolia and Crimson Rose

Supported by her loyal KA sons, the Old South will rise again. The Kappa Alpha Order, when founded, took their ideal the example set by the great Southerner, General Robert E. Lee.

In campus activities, the KAs play an active part, and also participate in the intramural program on a big scale. Their social life is one busy activity.

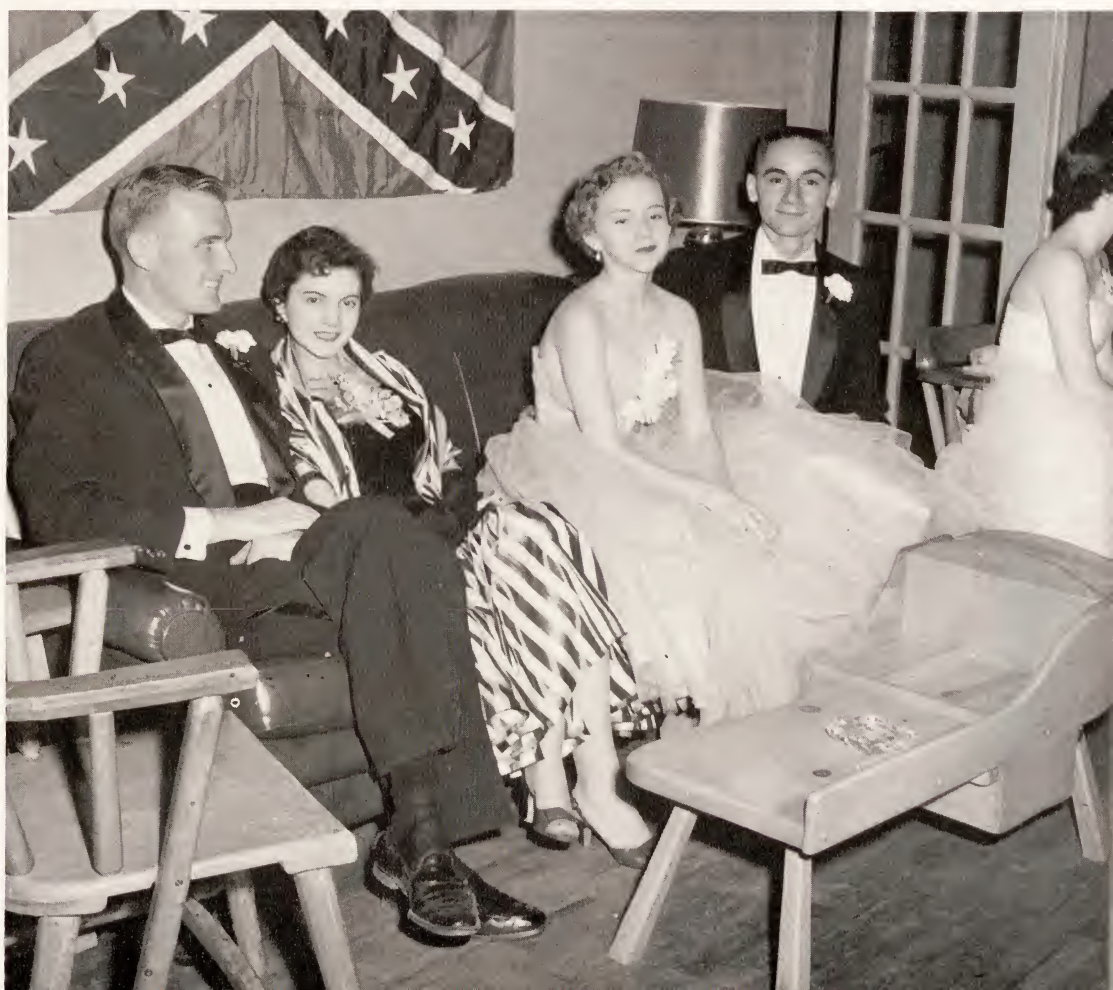

This year the Southern gentlemen were hosts to numerous dinner parties, open houses, the Pigalle Party, and Convivium Ball, honoring Robert E. Lee's birthday. These were all big occasions. The traditional Dixie Ball is the climax of the KA social calendar in the spring.

Numerous functions and parties were held, which were highlighted by the Goofball Party, the Christmas Formal, the Valentine Party, and the famous Alphatraz Party.

Installed on the campus in 1925, Lambda Chi Alpha has developed into a strong fraternity here as well as elsewhere, for it is the largest of all college fraternities, having one hundred fifty active chapters of wearers of the Cross and Crescent.

RUSHING men in their living room, PiKAs besiege rushees with the glittering tales of unequalled brotherhood and untold contacts.

Pi Kappa Alpha

DICK BENNETT, President

Founded Nationally: University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia, March 1, 1868.
Colors: Garnet and Old Gold
Flower: Lily-of-the-Valley

A great exuberance filled the Pi Kappa Alpha house this year at Homecoming when it was discovered that their untiring efforts had resulted in their "River of No Return" house decoration being awarded the first place in its division. As the year rolled on, the Pikes collected another first place — in the intramural basketball tournament. In football, their team was in third place.

The boys at 320 Arkansas Avenue were quite busy this year participating in campus activities. John Cross and Charles Adams were initiated into Scabbard and Blade, and Buddy Phillips was selected to edit next year's "A" Book. In the annual Civic Club Singfony, the PiKAs were awarded third place.

The Pikes are always ready for a party, and this year's social season was another full one for them. The most spectacular event of their social calendar was the Dream Girl Formal in the early spring.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

EDWARD CAREY, President

Founded Nationally: Richmond College, November 1, 1901.
Colors: Purple and Red
Flowers: American Beauty Rose and Purple Violet

Through the years Sigma Phi Epsilon has become known as "The Fraternity with a Heart." The distinctive golden heart pin worn by generations of Sig Eps is symbolic of the spirit and ideals which helped to carry the twelve original founders through their first few adverse years.

At Arkansas, the life of a Sig Ep is a full one. Besides intramural sports and other school functions, social events such as the Golden Heart Formal and the Spring Outing, as well as the Moonshiner's Ball and April Fool's Masquerade, are looked forward to by each Sig Ep.

The Arkansas Chapter residence at 753 West Dickson shares one thing with all other chapter houses across the United States — the traditional red door. Behind these doors are men with a common purpose, preserving and furthering the traditions that have built Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Theta Tau

BILL CHAVENS, President

Founded Nationally: University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota, October 15, 1904.

Colors: Dark Red and Gold

Flower: Jacqueminot Rose

With true brotherhood and a common professional interest, Theta Tau, the largest professional engineering fraternity in the country, was founded nationally close after the turn of the century.

Theta Tau members were claimed by many campus honorary fraternities. Jim Kumpe was president of Tau Beta Pi, of which Henry Bauni, Jimmy Walker, Gene Holloway, Tommy Taylor, James Hubbard and Palmer Terrell were also members. Serving as president of Blue Key and the Engineering Council was Sam Daggett. Bill Cravens, Tommy Branigan and Palmer Terrell were also members of Blue Key. In ODK were Henry Bauni, Jim Kumpe and Don Lewis. Palmer Terrell was in the Student Senate and Tommy Branigan and Don Lewis were editor and business manager respectively of the Arkansas Engineer.

On the social level, the Theta Taus celebrated with a Christmas party and the annual Founder's Day Banquet.

Farmhouse

Founded Nationally: University of Missouri, April 15, 1905.
Colors: Green, Gold and White
Flower: Sunburst Rose

The fraternity's major interest and activities are in the field of agriculture and membership is restricted to those whose studies lead to a degree in agriculture. "Builders of Men" is the motto and primary objective; therefore, emphasis is placed on scholarship, conduct, and active participation in campus activities.

Farmhouse fraternity is very proud of its scholarship rating on the campus. It has been the highest of all social fraternities for the past seven semesters with the exception of the fall semester of 1953 and the spring semester of 1954, when it was in the top three. The national organization leads all fraternities in the United States in scholarship.

Farmhouse is active in campus activities such as intramural sports and social functions, especially within the College of Agriculture. Several of its members are members of Alpha Zeta, an agricultural honorary fraternity, Blue Key, and ODK, mens' leadership fraternities. Farmhouse has officers is most all of the agricultural clubs and organizations.

Farmhouse has several social events including house parties and outings each semester. Its main event is the Farmhouse Sweetheart Banquet and Dance held in the spring.

Sigma Pi

Founded Nationally: Vincennes University, Vincennes, Indiana February 26, 1897.
Colors: Lavender and White
Flower: Lavender Orchid

Emphasizing scholarship, social activities, and intramural participation, Sigma Pi members take an active part on the campus. House dances, picnics and parties constitute the social calendar, which is particularly highlighted by the Orchid Ball, the annual spring formal. Founder's Day is also a big occasion.

Founding Sigma Pi were four men, interested in promoting brotherhood, culture, and a high degree of excellence at their university. From this founding over fifty active chapters have arisen, with almost every state represented, including two chapters in Arkansas.

A fellowship of complete brotherhood exists among the boys who wear the Greek cross of gold.

Holcombe Hall and Scott House

ELEANOR ELLIS, President

Since the first week of school when everyone tried in vain to remember names and faces and to get used to this new way of life, the girls of Holcombe Hall and Scott House have come a long way. Jumping right into the spirit of things, the girls sang their way to first place in the Civic Club Singfony, and also won the women's volleyball intramurals.

To boast of their beauties was only natural, for in selecting Razor-back beauties, two from their group had been chosen — Clarice Anderson and Lorraine Funk. The Army ROTC picked Doris Ann Baggett and Joan Williams as two of their Honorary Lt. Colonels, and Teddy Panos was a Lt. Colonel in the Air Force ROTC. The Homecoming court included two more Holcombe residents, Dixie Dawson and Mary Kennedy.

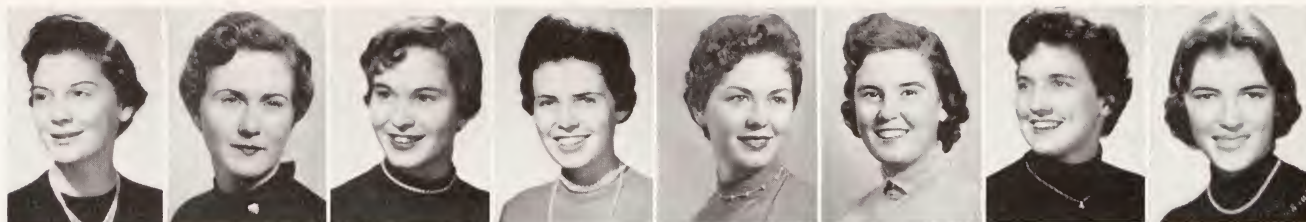

Brightening the routine of studying, pajama parties were frequent, and informal dances, open houses and a spring formal were also included on the social agenda.

Organized Independent Women

Formed in order to represent the best interests of those women students not affiliated with organized houses on the campus, OIW provides an active program of intramural athletics, social activities, stimulation of scholastic interests and participation in all campus affairs.

Setting an example for the other members were such outstanding students as Pat Ambrose, a member of Mortar Board and Kappa Delta Pi; Katherine Lussky, Mortar Board; Susan Melton and Geneva Pruett, winners of Laura Yeater scholarships.

Chosen as Razorback Beauty was Delona Carter, and Alison Delaney represented the Air Rorce ROTC as an Honorary Lt. Colonel.

The social season featured a spring outing, Christmas party and finals party.

4-H House

Parties and studies made the world go 'round for the girls that called 4-H House home this past school year. As for parties, the 4-H social activities were centered around the Harvest Moon Ball, Pollyanna Banquet at Christmas, spring outing, dinner-dance honoring new members, sweater hop, and faculty tea. In April, Founder's Day was celebrated with a banquet honoring new house officers and alumnae.

The spirit of cooperation and loyalty fostered in the house contributed an essential part in attaining the most from the school year. The girls worked together to win second place in the intramural volleyball tournament, and three members were selected for the honorary varsity volleyball team.

Members of 4-H who were outstanding on the campus this year were: Barbara Keil, Mortar Board and Student Senate; Babs Buchanan, president of WRA and chairman of AWS Fashion and Etiquette committee; Dorothy Reddell, Mortar Board, historian and district and state president of FTA; Laura Hemby, vice-president of Phi Upsilon Omicron; and Jo Ann Latimer, chairman of REW foods committee.

Carnall Hall

BETTY JEAN HAMILTON, President

Taking part in many campus activities was the habit of Carnall Hall girls this year. Spurred by a desire to participate in all affairs, the girls had a busy and successful year. Campus honors were bestowed on many of their group. Noralee Phariss was a member of Mortar Board, vice-president of AWS, and on the University debate team; Janie McGill headed the Student Union Special Projects committee; Betty Jean Hamilton served as treasurer of Colhecon; Jackie Rosewell was maid to the Agri Queen and secretary of A.S.A.; Selma Plowman and Barbara Park were treasurer and secretary respectively of Psi Chi; and Jolynn Fenn was treasurer of Pi Mu Delta and secretary of A.E.D.

Throughout the year the girls enjoyed many social functions — birthday dinners, sock hops, house-parties, "stag party" before the AWS Vice-Versa Dance, the annual Christmas dinner-dance, spring formal, outing, and the spring faculty tea. The activities of the house are directed by a board, consisting of the twelve elected house officers, and in the spring these incoming and outgoing boards enjoyed a retreat held at Lake Weddington. All of these activities, however, were climaxed by the Senior Dinner, at which time the outstanding senior girl was announced.

Named after Miss Ella Carnall, the hall was the first women's dormitory built on a college campus in Arkansas.

In intramural sports Carnall placed third in the volleyball tournament, and was in the finals in softball this year. With their "Keep 'em down to Zero" theme in the house decorations at Homecoming, the girls were awarded the third place trophy.

Davis Hall

MARILYN WICKLIFF, President

Returning to their "home away from home" last fall, Davis Hall residents began a full social season. The annual sweater hop, open house for Homecoming, the annual "Kiddies" party for underprivileged children, a Valentine Formal, spring outing, Senior Breakfast, faculty tea, and open house for the freshmen girls contributed to a busy round of festivities.

Although few in number, Davis Hall is well represented on the campus. Barbara Parchman and Marilyn Wickliff were tapped for Mortar Board the past year; Helen Harnden was selected for Phi Beta Kappa; and Barbara Lawrence, Evelyn Van Hoorebeke and Marilyn Wickliff received scholarships for outstanding scholastic work. Mary Frances Izell was president of Coterie and Marilyn Wickliff was president of Orchesis. Chosen as Honorary Lt. Colonel for the Air Force ROTC was Faith Eads and Myra Hazel sat in the Homecoming court.

Completed in 1942, Davis Hall was named in honor of Mary Ann Davis, a former instructor at the University, and houses approximately fifty upperclass women residents.

Buchanan House

Buchanan House was an enthusiastic participant in all men's intramural activities, but was not limited to this phase of campus life alone. It was represented in the Student Court by Will Horn, who also served as president of Scabbard and Blade. Eugene Morris was in Alpha Zeta and Hardy Cloutier was vice-president of the National Agronomy club. Two of Buchanan's representatives to the MIHC held offices — Will Horn was president and Eugene Morris, secretary.

A large outing to some noted resort in the spring spotlights the social season, which also consists of several stag and mixed parties, listening sessions for football games and other small outings.

Droke House

A successful year was experienced by the boys of Droke House, who shared in campus activities, intramurals, and social affairs. The House is governed by a house constitution as well as the constitution of the Men's Inter-house Congress.

Guiding the boys as president at the beginning of the year was Don Pridemore; however, upon taking up residence off campus, he resigned, and Harry Glaze was selected to fill the station for the remainder of the semester.

Although only in operation for two years, Droke House is rapidly growing and taking its place on the campus.

Ripley House this year completed its second year of operation on the University campus. Entering both a basketball and football team in the intramural League, the House placed a special emphasis on campus athletics. Social doings came in the form of one big event — an outing at Lake Weddington in early January.

Ripley residents were to be found in many campus activities. Harold Baer was vice-president of Phi Eta Sigma; Robert Baker served as vice-president of Circle K; J. B. Blackburn was on the Student Union Central Planning committee; Alvin Cook was vice-president of MIHC; Powell A. Shockley, social chairman of MIHC; and James P. Smith was secretary of Beta Alpha Psi.

Gladson House

In its second year as a residence for upperclassmen, Gladson House embarked upon an intensive program of participation in school events, among which was the entry of a float in the Homecoming parade — its first such endeavor.

The fifty-four members of Gladson House are democratically governed by officers of their own choosing in a manner that emphasizes scholarship, group participation, house loyalty, and close fellowship. One of the main factors contributing to this fellowship has been the house's enthusiasm as a strong contender in intramural sports throughout the year.

Gladson sends representatives to the Men's Interhouse Congress, where, in conjunction with other house delegates, they help determine the governing policies of all its members. Jim Loudermilk is an officer in this body.

Under the capable leadership of Tom Whitaker, its social activities have included outings, banquets, religious discussions, dances, and house get-togethers.

Among its campus leaders are Jack McClain and Lloyd Miller, Tau Beta Phi; Phil Korenblat, AED; Peter Cei, Scabbard and Blade; and O. B. Fulmer, Student Senate.

Athletic activities were directed by intramural manager Walter Morrison, and Charles Warner, social chairman of the hall, planned several entertaining and successful social activities. Among these were the outing at Lake Weddington, the Homecoming dance, and a Christmas "Kiddie Party."

Mostly maudlin

In the third drawer of my bureau at the House, underneath some sweaters and an old copy of Playboy, there is a well-thumbed copy of Voltaire's Candide. The book doesn't belong to me; I borrowed it almost two years ago, but I don't intend to return it. There is a peculiar fascination about a borrowed book that increases the value of its content, however good or poor it may be, and develops an interest that attends the book as an object rather than a work of literature. The 1956 Razorback isn't literature, but it is a borrowed book.

The ideas that developed into the Razorback were borrowed from people in the alumni office, from some staff members in the Traveler office across the hall and from the people at the Southwestern Engraving company in Tulsa, in addition to ideas of the staff that were influenced by a variety of sources.

The pleasure buried deep in anxiety that accompanies the publication of the book was increased by the confidence that Professor Thalheimer, the Razorback's advisor, reposed in the staff, and by the interest displayed by the Southwestern Engraving company, which was reflected by R. C. Walker's frequent trips to Fayetteville and the telephone conversations with Gene McRae.

The crying towels supplied every few days by Chris and Dusty Rhodes, coffee in the Union with the Traveler staff at their five o'clock ritual and the walks down the hill to the House with the Traveler editor decreased the troubles of a winter's hibernation in Hill Hall and made it all seem relatively worthwhile.

The satisfaction that every editor is supposed to feel at the end of the year came not so much with the finished product as with the opportunity to have worked with a staff composed of interesting, wonderful people: Don Millsap, the only yearbook veteran on the staff, who put aside an overworked camera to write copy when the editorial staff was hard-pressed; Bob Harlan, whose talented and prolific 35 and Rollei encouraged a sometimes desperate editor; Terry Guinn and his tales of Salzburg that accounted for much unwritten copy; Garnett Massey, a staff editor with frightening competency; Patt White, who managed the most difficult job on the staff with an ability and assurance, if not with calmness, that relieved much of the pressure before the final deadline; Lila Beth Burke, who compiled the index without complaints or questions.

It was a pleasure to work for a short while with Ed Puska, whose quality of work and remarkable personality will long be remembered in Fayetteville, and never forgotten by those who knew him.

The Review in Sound on the inside back cover of this book is evidence of the outstanding ability of Steve Friedheim. The record would probably never have been produced if it were not for the persistence of Steve, whose only remark about the prodigious undertaking was, "It was almost a bigger job than I had expected."

Yousuf Karsh, who is one of the world's foremost portrait photographers (and consequently one of the busiest), graciously consented to select this year's Razorback beauties. He had a difficult job, but we think his choices were well made.

Thanks to Vance Arbuckle, Phyllis Dillaha and Frances Wilson, who moved over to the Razorback office after the Traveler had been put to bed and helped a frantic staff close out their book.

The visit to Camden, where the Razorback is printed by the Hurley company, to read proof and finish the copy was as rewarding as it was exhausting. The pictures and copy were both behind the deadline, and Wallace Hurley told us over coffee that he bet eight to five that the engraver would finish before we did. He won his bet.

The majority of the hundreds of problems and minor crisis that are encountered in the publication of a yearbook were handled by Jack Williams, who accepted much of the editor's responsibility and managed the interferences with a diplomacy the editor never could have mustered. The late hours weren't in the contract, but Jack stayed to turn out the last light in Hill Hall and drive downtown for breakfast at four during the last hectic weeks.

And Shaw, dear friend, the road that we were to travel has come to an end. No more all night stands in the Razorback office with your bilious instant coffee and stale vanilla wafers; I promise to never again call you in the middle of the night from somewhere in south Arkansas and ask you to wire money so I can get back to school; no more will you have to lie to your instructors and my instructors for my benefit. It's been real, David.

The Razorback has been an interesting experience. Thanks for the ride.

Good business

This University community is composed of some 4,400 students and represents a buying power that is staggering in its potential. Some students wait until they are home to purchase the larger items that are necessary for a year at school. They buy in Little Rock or Texarkana, and some of the students from south Arkansas drive to Shreveport, while those that are from Forrest City eastward cross the river into Tennessee and trade in Memphis. But after the first year in Fayetteville, the student begins to develop buying habits that tend to center around the community where he lives more than nine months of the twelve. He trades with the retailers and businessmen who have helped to build northwest Arkansas into one of the fastest growing market areas in the state.

These business men have also watched and, to a large degree, fostered the growth of the University. Their interest in the University is manifest in the advertising space they purchase in the Traveler and Razorback. The Traveler could not go to press four days a week were it not for this advertising, and the Razorback would be severely limited without it.

Just as it is good business to advertise for the student trade, it's good business for the students to trade with the advertisers.

A GOOD NEIGHBOR

Producer of more than 70 Petroleum and Chemical products for Transportation, Industry and Agriculture, Lion Oil Company is proud of its leading role in the development of the South's industrial potential.

Lion sends to market each year the equivalent of more than 65,000 railway carloads of products from its three manufacturing plants in Arkansas and Louisiana. It pays approximately $17,500,000 yearly to 3,000 employees in wages and benefits, and it pays another $17,000,000 in taxes. Altogether, Lion puts nearly $100,000,000 into circulation annually throughout its territory.

Industrial development is going ahead in the South on a bigger scale than ever before. Lion Oil Company continues to lead the way with the most advanced methods of manufacturing, finding and producing vital raw materials, and in scientific research. The result: more jobs, better products for consumers, conservation of resources and more efficient use of those resources. No wonder that to Southerners, the Sign of the Lion has truly become the Sign of a Good Neighbor!
